FOREWORD

The book you hold before you is the product of 20 years of research. The object of this massive investigative effort has been to trace the descendants of Thomas Hosmer (1603 - 1687). Like Volume I which preceded it, this current study is more than a genealogy. It contains maps, photographs, documents, and considerable background material.

The Hosmer Heritage ..., Volume II, covers the period roughly between the Revolutionary War and the Spanish-American War. During this century and a quarter, three generations of the family have come and gone. Their accomplishments and their achievements are duly noted within these pages. While the bulk of the material in this study is devoted to the "Hosmer" family, there are also sections on the "Congdon", "Ash", and "Kittredge" families, as well. Towards the end of the volume, the reader will find 3 appendixes, an extensive bibliography, and 2 indexes (one for names; one for places and topics). Through documentation and attention to detail, I have attempted to present a coherent and balanced view of the family. How successful I have been in this effort is left to the reader to determine.

What were our ancestors really like? That, I think, is a question all of us have asked ourselves at one time or another. We have, of course, paintings and photographs, but these remembrances of the past provide only imperfect reflections of our forebears' physical appearance. Their personality, their emotional make-up, their moral code can not be determined from such physical evidence. Frequently, what little we do know of these intangibles comes from a variety of second-hand sources -- family stories, hearsay, local histories and the like. Valuable as these secondary sources are, they can, occasionally, be tainted by the reporter's own experiences and prejudices. To counter this, we seek primary sources whenever possible. Eyewitness accounts, newspaper reports, and documents of all kind are extremely valuable in this regard. Perhaps, the best evidence of all, however, comes from the writings our ancestors themselves. Fortunately, the Hosmer family has been blessed with several fine and gifted writers. By examining their letters, speeches, poems, literary works, and journals, we get a rare perspective into the times in which our ancestors lived. Through their written words, we understand, to a degree, how they perceived the world and how they viewed their own role in it. This book presents several examples of their literary talent. It is not an exhaustive collection, but it is, I think, one of some merit. God, nature, justice, war, human weakness, good and evil, are but a few of the topics touched upon in these extraordinary works. No one can read these legacies of the past without a sense of oneness, a sense of continuity.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Genealogical research is a cooperative enterprise. It requires the attention and good will of many people -- both in and out of the family. Vital records, as important as they are, can only provide part of the answer. For the rest, we must depend on family papers and personal knowledge. The individuals listed below, have helped me to accumulate this important family material. They, along with the 93 persons listed in Volume I, have formed my information network. Without their help, I could not have completed this work. For this invaluable assistance, I will forever be in their debt.

INSTITUTIONS:
PUBLIC AND PRIVATE

All genealogical studies of consequence must rely on the collections of libraries, archives, governmental agencies, and private societies. These public and private institutions are often the only depositories of primary information available to the family researcher. When family papers and documents have been lost, burned, or otherwise destroyed, these institutions can duplicate, replace, or, in some situations, even reconstruct the data required. Through the years, these organizations have preserved, protected, and systematically organized our collective heritage. In their files, the lives of our ancestors are chronicled. Despite manpower shortages, fiscal restraints and other limiting factors, these remarkable research centers have made their holdings available to all who wish to use them. Without their help, much of the material in this book would have been impossible to obtain. To the institutions listed in Volume I, I would like to add the names of the following organizations. Their assistance has truly been invaluable.

THE HOSMER INN

The Hosmer Inn, pictured above, was owned and operated by Sylvester Hosmer (1786-1854). This structure, expanded in 1818, served the needs of the travelling public for many years. Originally located between the villages of Avon and Caledonia (in Livingston County), the inn became a popular rest stop for those travelling between Buffalo and eastern New York. By the standards of the day, this wood framed way station was considered a landmark of some consequence. In 1803, a traveler on the Great Western Turnpike wrote: " ' Hosmer is an intelligent man and keeps a good inn ' ". These words were high praise in frontier New York! Apparently, clean lodging, good food, and quality libation were appreciated as much then as they are today.

When its usefulness as an inn came to an end, the building served, in turn, as a private residence and as a granary. After years of neglect, the future of this historic building was in serious jeopardy. If it were not for the foresight of some dedicated individuals, this building would have been lost forever. Moved to its present location and completely restored, The Hosmer Inn is now part of the Genesee Country Village and Museum. This 200 acre historic park is located about a mile east of Mumford, N. Y.

SEVEN
STARTED

This church was organized on August 27, 1810 when Rev. Simon Waterman and seven women [Mrs. Alexander Beebe, Mrs. Thomas Hosmer, Mrs. Shubal Alfred, Mrs. Levi Matthews, Mrs. Josiah Southworth, Mrs. Thomas Wheeler, and Mrs. David Williams] met in Shubal Alfred's barn to form a religious society.

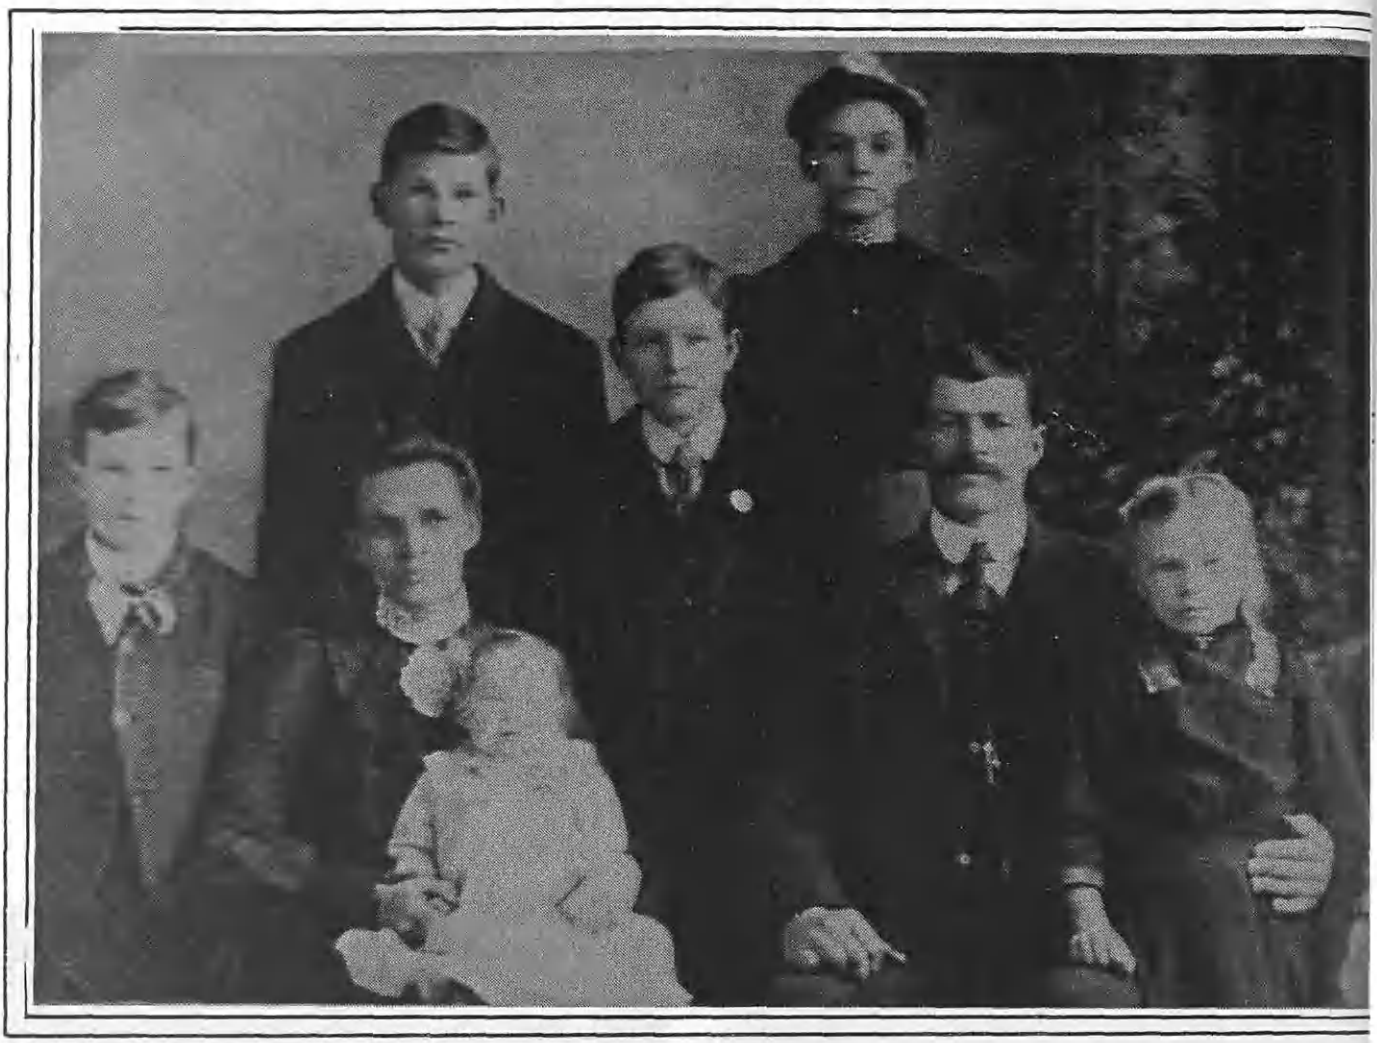

The names of the Church's founding women appear on the stained glass windows, on the north side of the sanctuary.

> I believe you are correct that Homer's name was Henry Homer (?) Hosmer, possibly Junior .... I suspect that Homer was a bit of a rebellious rascal, and possibly did not want to be identified with his father, or maybe didn't like to be called "junior". That's strictly speculation, but there are few ties between him and Judge Henry, that I can find.

I have a copy of an affidavit signed by her, dated 11 Aug. 1904, acknowledging the discrepancy, but stating that she doesn't know how it began. Burial	25 June 1572	Martha Hosmer	Daughter of James Hosmer

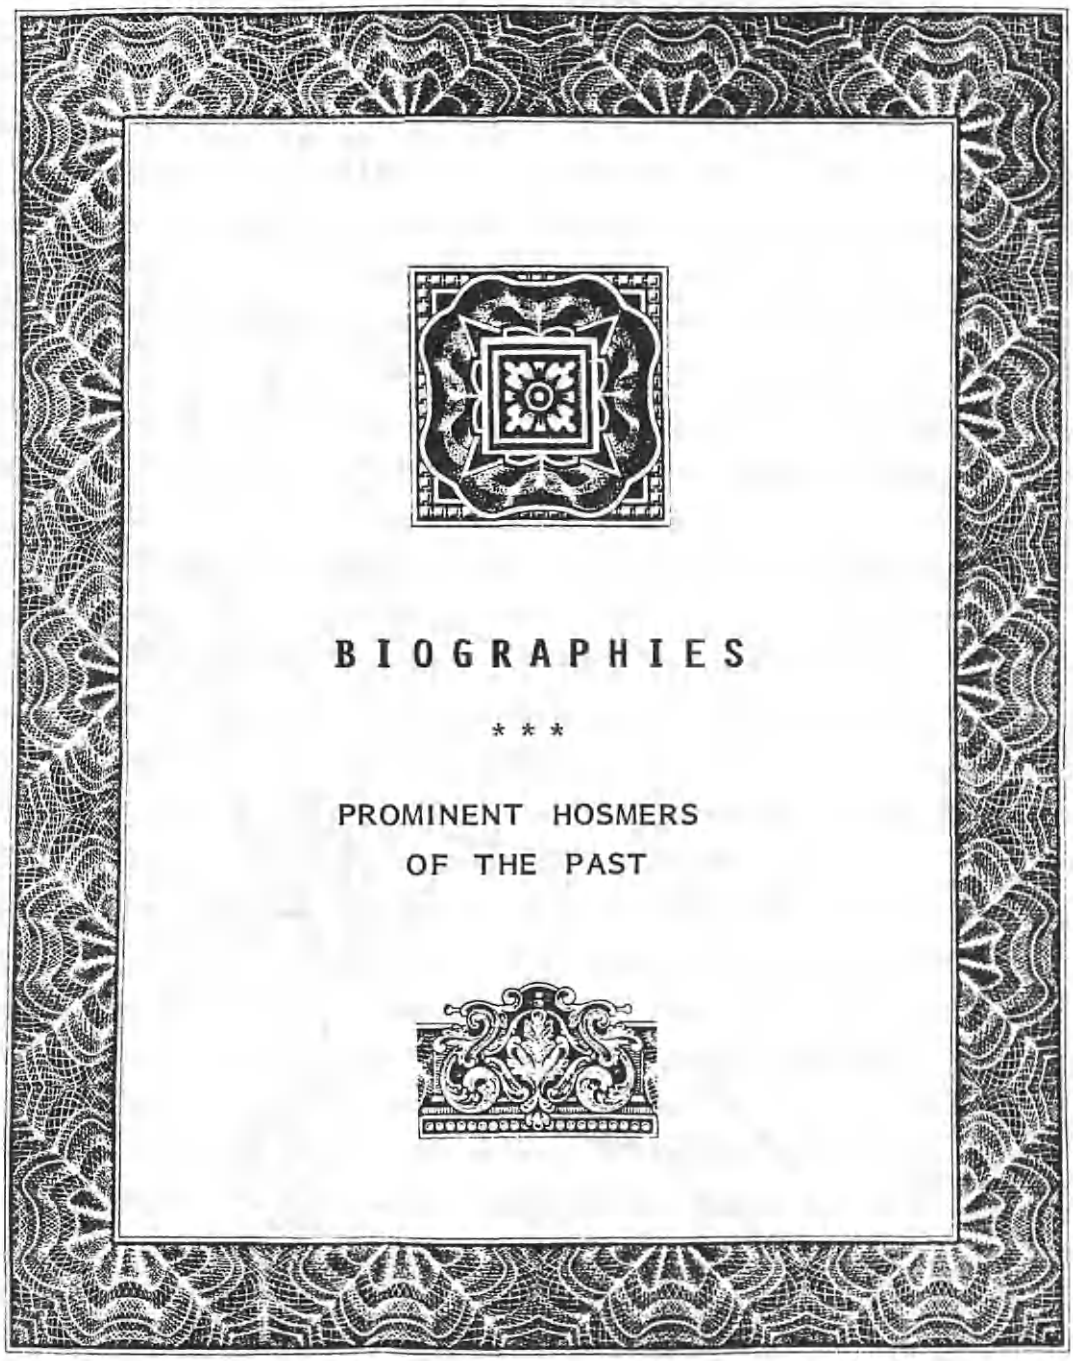

* Note: James Appes may have been related to Mary Appes [wife of William Selden and mother of Dorothy Selden]. Both lived in Ticehurst and both were about the same age. The fact that James Appes named a daughter, "Marye", would also seem to support this hypothesis. It is quite possible that James Appes and Mary (Appes) Selden [wife of William Selden] were brother and sister or first cousins.

SYLVESTER HOSMER
(1794 - 1873)

In many ways, Sylvester Hosmer typified the farmer of the first half of the 19th century. Hard working and God fearing, he was a self-made man. What earthly goods he accumulated in the course of his life came from the sweat of his brow and the bounty of the land. Nothing was given to him. Like all farmers, since the beginning of time, he was subject to the vagaries of the weather and the fluctuations of the market place. In the face of such uncertainties, he and his neighbors had to rely on one another -- giving and receiving help when the need arose. Behind everything, there was a strong and deep religious undercurrent. It colored all aspects of their life and sustained them in times of crisis. Through faith and hard work, Sylvester made his way in this new land. Not only did he survive in such a harsh environment, but he prospered. That, in itself, says much about the character of the man.

Sylvester Hosmer was not among the first settlers to come to Niagara County, New York, but he, certainly, was part of the second wave of adventurers who rushed into the area after the War of 1812. Cheap land, rich soil, and Erie Canal "fever" were powerful inducements.[1] Census records indicate that in 1820, Sylvester Hosmer lived in the village of Wilson.[2] How much earlier he had arrived is unknown, but it was probably not more than one or two years.[3] The conditions in Wilson during this postwar period were difficult.[4] Sylvester Hosmer, unfortunately, left no notes on the subject, but others did.[5] Orsamus Turner, a prominent historian, interviewed several long time residents during the late 1840's. The following account is a paraphrased version of an interview Mr. Turner had with Reuben Wilson. "Squire" Wilson was one of the village's original settlers.[6]

> When I [Reuben Wilson] came in [1810], there was scarcely an acre of ground cleared in what is now Wilson. There was no road up and down the lake. In the fall of 1811, there was a road opened from fort Niagara to Somerset; it was generally along the lake shore, though deviating at the streams; at its termination, a foot path continued on to Johnson's creek on Ridge Road.

> When I first began to raise grain, I had to go across to Port Hope and Hamilton [Canada] for my grinding. Even after mills were built upon the [Holland Land] Purchase, it was easier to go across the lake [Ontario], than to travel the new roads.

> Previous to the war, myself and neighbors did our trading at Niagara .... We had no meetings or schools previous to the war; after it, and up to 1820, we had but occasional preaching in the neighborhood, by missionaries. We organized a school in 1815; built a log school house; Dr. Warner was our first teacher. He was both school teacher and physician. Our school commenced with only 12 or 15 scholars.

> The war [War of 1812] created a demand for any produce we had to sell, while it continued. In 1816 and '17, the seasons were unpropitious. In 1818 we had good crops, and the courage of the new settlers was revived, after a long period of gloom and depression, of struggling against formidable difficulties. When we began to have surplus produce, it was mostly needed by the new settlers that came in. For any thing we had to send off, Montreal was our market until the Erie Canal was finished.[7]

As can be seen from the above narrative, life in Wilson was, for many years, near the subsistence level.[8] Improvement came only as new settlers entered the area.[9] It is interesting to note that Sylvester's older brother, Prentice, had moved to Niagara County about the same time and had settled in Porter, a small community, not far from Fort Niagara.[10]. Before the close of the decade, another brother, Titus, would join Sylvester in Wilson.[11] Thus by 1830, the family was well represented in the county. For Sylvester, it must have been reassuring to have relatives so near.[12]

Located half way between the Towns of Hartland and Porter, Wilson was ideally situated. On the shores of Lake Ontario, it sat astride one of Western New York's major east-west roads. It was also not far from Lockport, a village on the Erie Canal.[13] Wilson's incredibly rich soil and its proximity to the area's major transportation centers made it an excellent choice as a location for a farm.[14] According to court records, Sylvester Hosmer obtained in 1835, a deed from the Holland Land Company to a portion of lot 88 [Township 15, Range 7]. Two years later, he acquired more of this same lot.[15] By 1850, he was well established and had real estate holdings valued at $5,375.[16] Additional acquisitions came in 1856 and 1857.[17] The directory of 1869 showed that, in that year, he farmed 100 acres on lot 8 [Township 15, Range 8].[18]

The Methodist Episcopal Church, of which Sylvester Hosmer was a member, came to Wilson in stages. For 19 years, Wilson was part of the church's Lewiston circuit. With no pastor of its own, the class in Wilson had to depend on the services of circuit riders.[19] Although, their visits came at irregular intervals they were, nevertheless, eagerly anticipated by the faithful.[20] Such an arrangement was inconvenient, but it was the best that could be prepared at the time. As the church grew, however, it became apparent that a more permanent religious presence was needed.[21] On December 28, 1835, in accordance with the laws of the State of New York, "The First Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Town of Wilson", was incorporated. Sylvester Hosmer and Daniel Terry presided over the assembly. At this meeting, the members also elected seven of their number to be trustees. Sylvester Hosmer was among those chosen.[22] The new trustees were equal to the task and, as a result, the church grew and prospered. In 1837, a frame church was erected on property donated by Andrew Bacon, and in 1846, a parsonage was built.[23]

Of his personal life little is known.[24] Judging from the information in the 1820 census, Sylvester probably married about 1818 or 1819.[25] His wife, Rebecca Kittredge[26], was six years his junior. A native of Vermont[27], she came to New York at an early age.[28] The couple had at least seven children[29], five of whom survived Sylvester.[30] The couple lived almost their entire married life in Wilson.[31]

HEZEKIAH LORD HOSMER
(1814 - 1893)

Few men of the 19th century lived a more colorful, a more exciting, or for that matter, a more rewarding life than Hezekiah Lord Hosmer Jr.[1] In his 78 years, he penned works of fiction and nonfiction, pursued half a dozen careers, served his country, and crossed a continent.[2] He brought the rule of law to a lawless territory and he informed a nation of its Western bounty. A literary scholar and a practical politician, he had the uncommon ability to blend into any situation. Like Theodore Roosevelt, who would come a generation later, Hezekiah personified the emerging American spirit -- independence, boldness, industry, and honesty.

Born into a family of education and privilege, Hezekiah preferred to rely on his own natural gifts and abilities than on the considerable resources of his family. In many ways, he was a man driven from within, a man never completely satisfied or comfortable with the status quo. Always testing himself, always pushing himself, he had a compelling need to excel. Motivation and ability, of course, were not Hezekiah's only advantages in this world. He also came from good stock.[3] His grandfather, Titus Hosmer[4], was a member of the Continental Congress and a signer of the Articles of Confederation.[5] His father, Hezekiah Lord Hosmer Sr.[6] was a congressman from New York State.[7] His uncle, Stephen Titus Hosmer, was a chief justice of the Connecticut Supreme Court.[8] From such a family background it is little wonder that young Hezekiah's interests would take on a decidedly legal and political flavor.[9]

Hezekiah was the youngest of five children.[10]. He never knew his father as he had died six months before he was born.[11] Little is known about his upbringing[12], except that he attended school[13] and was, apparently, a good student.[14] By the time he reached adolescence, he knew his own mind and wanted to go West. His first taste of life away from home came in Chenango County, N. Y. From there at age sixteen, he moved to Cleveland, Ohio where a relative, John W. Allen, resid A practicing attorney, Mr. Allen took Hezekiah under his wing. Under his tutelage, Hezekiah studied the law. In 1835, he passed the Ohio bar and, at the tender age of 21, became a member of the legal community. He commenced his practic in Willoughby, Ohio, but soon found it necessary to ride circuit. Residing for a time in Painesville and Maumee City, Hezekiah settled in Toledo in 1844.

While still riding the circuit in northwestern Ohio, Hezekiah took an interest in newspaper work. In 1844, he became editor and part owner of the Toledo Blade. For eleven years, 1844 to 1855, Hezekiah worked diligently to make the newspaper a success.[15] Then, for reasons still not completely understood, his interest in this enterprise waned.[16] In 1855, he resumed his law practice. It is interesting that during this period of transition, Hezekiah set aside time to write.[17] In 1858, he published, Early History of the Maumee Valley. Two years later, he completed work on his famed, Adela: The Octoroon.[18]

Few will doubt that 1860 was a momentous year in the history of the nation. That year was also a turning point in the life of Hezekiah Hosmer.[19] A lifelong Whig, Hezekiah switched parties and became a Republican. In the 1860 election, he strongly supported his adoptive party's platform and actively campaigned for the party's presidential candidate, Abraham Lincoln.[20] Hezekiah's change of political allegiance was not as dramatic as it first might have appeared.[21]. First, the Whig Party, for all practical purposes, was a political nonentity, as it had disintegrated about 1854.[22] Second, the Republican Party, like the northern wing of the Whig Party before it, totally and unconditionally opposed the institution of slavery.[23] When viewed in this light, Hezekiah's actions were not so much a break with the past as they were a continuation and reaffirmation of his own political beliefs.[24]

Following Lincoln's election, Hezekiah Hosmer went to Washington, D. C. It was his intent to apply for the position of Congressional Librarian. In this effort he was unsuccessful. His disappointment, however, was short-lived, as a new and potentially more interesting opportunity arose.[25] Through the good offices of Congressman James M. Ashley[26], Hezekiah secured the position of Secretary to the House Committee on Territories.[27] This job proved to be an invaluable learning experience. Not only was Hezekiah privy to some of the country's most sensitive territorial issues, but he was also in close and constant contact with some of this nation's most influential leaders.[28] When the Territory of Montana was organized in 1864, it fell upon the federal government to create an entire governmental structure -- almost overnight. Part of this task was to establish a territorial system of justice.[29] Hezekiah Hosmer, a lawyer and four year veteran of the committee on territories, was the logical choice to head this project.[30] On June 30, 1864, he received his appointment as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Montana.[31] This, then, began Hezekiah's western adventure -- an experience that would shape a territory and alter, forever, the life of a country lawyer.

Western travel in the 1860's was an ordeal by any standard.[32] Anyone who has read Mark Twain's Roughing It, will appreciate the discomfort, boredom, danger, and general inconvenience that it entailed.[33] There was, of course, a brighter side to travel in the West - its magnificent scenery. In a lecture delivered to the Travellers' Club of New York City in January 1866, Hezekiah Hosmer related his own impressions on this vast country.

> The visitor who, for the first time, finds himself in Montana, is wonder-struck at the vastness of the mountain and valley scenery which meets his gaze. ....
> The mountain is the grandest feature in Montana scenery. It is omnipresent, and presents as many forms of beauty and interest as there are points from which it may be surveyed. Sometimes it springs, naked and bare rock, from the plain, thousands of feet in height, and rolls into ridges and peaks for many miles; then again, gradual and wood-crowned, with delightful slopes and vista-like parks, and purling streams, it falls from its round and lofty summit by numerous plateaus, seemingly growing into the plain surrounding it, long before its descent is accomplished. Some of the mountains seen on the road from the Gallatin Valley to the Yellowstone have been wrought into forms of marvellous beauty, such as never yet have been delineated upon canvas. Long ranges, rising in pyramidal form to sharp knife-like edges; others with these edges regularly formed into saw-teeth; others turreted like castles; and others still towering to loftier heights, with bending heads, precipitous sides, and needle-shaped peaks, are seen scattered over an immense extent of country, whose interstices reveal large plains, rolling foot-hills, gloomy defiles, with here and there a shining stream, a grove of cottonwoods, or a forest of pines. The scenery is grand beyond the power of description, and begets a strange fascination in the mind of the beholder, who when away from it, never loses the desire to return and dwell for ever in its presence.[34]

The job before Hezekiah Hosmer, when he reached Montana, was formidable.[35] The Territory had no system of law[36], only a rather vague notion of right and wrong.[37] Therefore, the first order of business was to establish a legal base. Hezekiah chose common law. When this occasionally proved inadequate, Judge

Hosmer improvised. On questions of procedure, he followed Idaho's Practice Act of 1863. For problems in mining litigation and water rights, Judge Hosmer relied on precedents established by the California courts.[38] It was, admittedly, a "make-do" system, but one which fit well into the frontier conditions of the time.[39]

Chief Justice Hosmer opened his court in Virginia City, Montana on the first Monday in December 1864. His first court was the dining hall of the Planters' House. In the four years that followed, the court sat in many locations - some of which were not completely comfortable with its decisions. In an era of the vigilante and of self-imposed justice, the niceties of the law were not always appreciated. The Territorial Legislature also proved to be a thorn in the side of the court. Relations with the legislature became so acrimonious that this body passed a resolution calling for the resignation of the Chief Justice. Hezekiah Hosmer would have none of it, and he ignored their resolution.[40] He was, after all, appointed by the federal government and, as such, not subject to the whims of any territorial authority.[41] Despite these irritations, the Chief Justice continued his work unimpeded. He finished out his four year term and had no further serious outside interference.[42]

While still a member of the Montana Supreme Court, Hezekiah visited the East in the autumn of 1865.[43] While in New York City, he delivered an address to the Travellers' Club [previously cited]. His subject, of course, was Montana - its land and its people. The following excerpt comes from that address.

> It is generally supposed that the men who thus toil for gold belong exclusively to the laboring classes. This is not the case. I have seen lawyers, judges, clergymen, ex-members of Congress, ex-governors, merchants, even professors of the highest character in their old homes, toiling side by side with laborers from nearly all the nations of Europe. Mining is a great leveller. The man who 'puts on airs' among the miners is very apt to be 'taken down' when he least expects it. They are generally people of thought. Those who lack culture, supply its place with experience. They are sympathetic and clannish. Common interests beget common action. Once, while I [Hezekiah Hosmer] was in the Territory, there was a dearth of flour. The merchants raised the price to an amount which the miners deemed exorbitant. A flour riot was the consequence. Fifteen hundred miners, with guns on their shoulders, marched into Virginia [City], perambulated the streets, searched stores and dwellings, > taking from each all the flour they could find, except such as was actually in use in families. The next day they sold it in small quantities to families which needed it, at prices which they deemed compensatory, paid these to the owners, and quietly disbanded. Had they been opposed there would have been bloodshed; but as the people acquiesced, the whole affair passed off as one of the incidents of mountain life.[44]

The response to his remarks was enthusiastic[45], so much so, that it convinced him to write a fuller account of his observations of the West. Upon his return, he wrote, A Trip to the States.

Hezekiah's term at the Supreme Court ended in 1868. The following year he was appointed postmaster of Virginia City. He held this post until 1872 when he moved to San Francisco.[46] His later years were spent in the more relaxing atmosphere of the city-by-the-bay.[47] There he held positions at the customhouse and state mining bureau. When not engaged in official business, Hezekiah turned his attention to writing and scholarly research. In 1887, he published, Bacon and Shakespeare in the Sonnets.[48]

As is so often the case, the success of a person's professional career does not always match that of his personal life. Hezekiah had more than his share of tragedy.[49] He lost 3 wives and 2 of his 4 children.[50] Touched by sorrow, he understood life more than most. Through professional adversity and considerable personal tragedy, Hezekiah Hosmer neither lost his zest for life nor his drive for excellence.[51]

> Idaho and Oregon to Portland, and thence complete the journey by sea; or he may do as I did, embark with his family in a small Mackinaw boat on the Yellowstone, 830 miles above its mouth, and float down that river and the Missouri at the rate of 100 miles per day, 2,300 miles, to Sioux City, Iowa, and thence proceed by coach and rail to the Atlantic sea-board. The safety of most of these routes is subject to the ominous proviso, that the 'friendly sons of the forest' ('our red brethren' I think is the fraternal cognomen given them by our Government) do not kill the traveller on his way. .... I chose the Yellowstone route, because it added to the terrors of exposure the charm of novelty; and there were a sufficient number in the company, in case of attack, to teach these poor Indians, as well as our humane Government, a valuable lesson.

CHARGE TO THE GRAND JURY BY CHIEF JUSTICE HEZEKIAH LORD HOSMER DECEMBER 5, 1864

The following address was delivered by Chief Justice Hezekiah L. Hosmer on December 5, 1864, at the occasion of the impanelment of the first grand jury of the First Judicial District of the Territory of Montana. Written in the eloquent and flowing proses of the period, Justice Hosmer's remarks stand out as a powerful defense of America's judicial system. What makes this piece so appealing is its clarity of exposition and ease of transition. From a brief history of Montana's judicial past, Hezekiah Hosmer effortlessly expounded on the principles of justice and morality. His powers of organization, as seen in this discourse, were considerable. His abilities to reduce complex concepts to their simplest forms were equally formidable. He was, in short, a superb writer and a consummate orator.

CHARGE

GENTLEMEN OF THE JURY: – The assembling of a grand jury in this new Territory, affords opportunity for a casual survey of the interests committed to its charge. The cause of Justice, hitherto deprived of the intervention of regularly organized courts, has been temporarily subserved by voluntary tribunals of the people partaking more of the nature of self-defence than the comprehensive principles of the Common Law. It is no part of the business of this court to find fault with what has been done; but rather, in common with all good citizens, to laud the transactions of an organization, which, in the absence of law, assumed the delicate and responsible office of purging society of all offenders against its peace, happiness and safety.

Such societies, originating in necessity, have been common of late years in communities without law, and in which the penalties of the law were not proportioned to the criminality of the offence. – Their adaptation to the necessities of new settlements, has obtained for them an approbation so universal, that they are the first measures resorted to, by well-intentioned men, to free themselves of that vile class of adventurers which infest all unorganized communities for purposes of fraud, robbery and murder. In no part of our country have they labored more efficiently than here. No where else did they enter upon their duties, amid greater embarassments. It was questionable, even when they commenced, whether they were numerically equal to this task. The sources of official power had been monopolized by the very class which preyed upon society. The greatest villain of them all – with hands reeking with the blood of numerous victims – was the principal ministerial officer of the Territory, and had at his beck a band of wretches who had become hardened in their bloody trade, years before they came here to practice it. In this condition of affairs, there could be but one of two courses to pursue – to hang these offenders or submit to their authority, and give the Territory over to misrule and murder. – Happily, the former course prevailed, and the summary punishment visited upon a few, frightened the survivors from the Territory, and restored order and safety.

Much as we may approve the means of self-protection thus employed, and the promptitude with which they were applied, our admiration ceases, when they assert an authority defiant of law, and usurp offices which belong only, to Government itself. We give them all the credit they deserve, by according them praise for what they have accomplished; but they have fulfilled their work. To go farther is to commit crime, and undo what has been so well done. They are no longer necessary. No law-abiding citizen wishes their continuance. They should be at once and forever abandoned. Courts of law and equity – such courts as our Government and people, everywhere, throughout our great republic recognize as authority, are from this day forth, established in this Territory, clothed with ample power to investigate and punish all offences against the peace and safety of society. Let us then erect no more impromptu scaffolds. Let us inflict no more midnight executions, Let us give to every man, how aggravated soever his crime, the full benefit of the freeman's right – an impartial trial by jury. Vigilantes and courts – and all good men can co-operate in fulfilling the grand purpose of the criminal law; that of bringing offenders to justice, without violating any of its provisions; but the very first element in such a warfare against crime, must be the general recognition of courts of law, as the great conservators of peace and safety. No resort to any other power is justifiable, or consistent with good government, except in such exigencies as that through which the people of this Territory have so signally passed.

Again, gentlemen, there is danger in the continuance of these organizations, to their framers. The temptation to pervert them from their legitimate objects is so great, that instances have occurred in other societies, where they have committed more flagrant offences against the laws, than those they were designed to prevent. There can be no morality or progress in a public sentiment founded entirely upon the principle of fear. It is a principle at war with all the principles which lie at the foundation of our Government. The sooner that society is rid of it, where it prevails, the sooner will it be animated by a strong and healthful affection for the government and its laws. In a community restrained by the operation of good laws, all subversive organizations are criminal in themselves, and should be among the first subjects to arouse the jealousy and stimulate the investigation of a grand jury. You will perceive the propriety of these remarks, gentlemen, at this time, when you consider that for every execution of an individual by any body of men, unauthorized by law, whatever their organization, it would be the imperative duty of this court, to charge you that they had been guilty of a highly penal offense, and to urge you to the utmost vigilance in your inquiries to expose them and present them for trial and punishment.

You, gentlemen of the jury, have been regularly empannelled and sworn to make enquiry into the crimes that have been committed in this county. Your duties are both delicate and responsible. Your oath requires that you present no person through 'malice, hatred or ill-will.' This needs no explanation. Another part of it, that 'you will leave none unpresented through fear, favor, or affection,' more difficult perhaps of performance, is equally comprehensible. Another part of it, that you will leave none unpresented 'for any reward or the promise of hope thereof,' I will not comment upon, lest you might regard it as an imputation upon your integrity. A person accused of crime, reserves still another and an important privilege through the medium of your oath, and that is that you will make no disclosures of testimony, except when called upon to do so in a court of justice. The most perfect protection is thus given to the character and reputation of an accused person – a protection which should never be withdrawn, until a jury is fully convinced of his guilt. This oath, gentlemen, is, of itself, illustrative of the exact justice with which the law seeks to deal with those who are bold and bad enough to violate it. There is no vengenance in it. It neither pursues or punishes from sinister considerations. Justice with us, like the heathen representation, is blindfold, that she may not see where the blow must fall, but she holds the scales with equal poise, and the sword is in readiness to inflict condign punishment upon him who is found wanting. She seeks only to answer, in a rational manner, the demand of every good man, who feels that his own nature has been belied by the commission of crime. She aims to do right. The offender is punished because he has disturbed the harmony of society. If his crime has been that of murder, it is not only the destruction of a life, but it is the offence against God – against morality – the terrible example thus furnished, and the danger to society of permitting such a crime to go unpunished, that the law considers. Death is inflicted because no lighter penaly [sic] could answer the demand of justice, and not merely for the purpose of taking human life. So with the subordinate or lighter offences

The punishment proportioned to each has greater reference to the society that has been outraged, than to the miserable individual upon whom it is inflicted. He, indeed, whether on the scaffold or in the solitude of the prison, is but the instrument which the law employs, to shadow forth its judgments upon minds yet uncontaminated by guilt and crime.

As the result of this grand fabric of punishments, peace and safety are preserved – crime seldom occurs – and all fears and anxieties incident to an unorganized condition of society vanish before the benign and omnipresent spirit of the law. ... No one doubts that this may be produced, if courts and juries co-operate with other moral agencies in purifying society of those evils which lie at and are continually sapping the foundations of rational happiness. Much – very much of our future character as a people, depends upon the manner in which crime is met at the commencement. You can all bear witness to the fact, that where men are themselves indifferent to the various influences usually employed for their protection and refinement, crime and disorder are sure to prevail; religion is neglected; the Sabbath is customarily profaned, and society itself becomes irresistibly the minister to all the lower and baser passions of our nature.

WILLIAM HOWE CUYLER HOSMER
(1814 - 1877)

Obsessed with the daily chores of life, we often miss the wonders of nature about us. Though surrounded by color and beauty, many of us seem to be oblivious to the intricacies of life and the joys of nature. The vibrant hues of a sunset, the resplendent colors of a wildflower, the mournful calls of a coyote are but a few of Earth's many treasures. How sad it is that many of us trudge through life without experiencing these truly awe inspiring events. Ours, of course, is not the only generation whose members have lost sight of the trees for the forest. Our ancestors, preoccupied with life's daily struggles, were also guilty of indifference. To counter this materialistic view of the world, each generation has produced a handful of gifted poets and writers. These special people have helped their fellow man see the world in a slightly different, if kindlier, light.

William Howe Cuyler Hosmer was among this select group.[1] Although a lawyer by profession, he devoted a good part of his life to poetry.[2] His first book was published when he was only sixteen years old. Literary recognition came quickly, as a consequence of his contributions to several of the area's periodicals - including the noted, Knickerbocker Magazine.[3] With a keen and discerning eye for the commonplace, he sought to celebrate nature in all its magnificence. He also had a deep and abiding respect for the Indian race. Many of his works deal with their character, legends, traditions, and culture.[4] His sympathetic treatment of them came as a result of years of personal contact.

William's mother, Elizabeth (Berry) Hosmer, was a remarkable woman. In a time when Indian matters were not always appreciated, she took time to know the Indians as people. She knew several Indian languages, and these she taught to her young son. William was a willing and able student and soon shared his mother admiration and concern for the Indians of western New York.[5] According to one source, William, " ' sat by their campfires and in their councils ' ". He immersed himself in their culture and became a lifelong advocate of their ways.[6] To expand his knowledge of this noble race, he visited other areas in the country where they lived -- Wisconsin in 1836[7] and Florida in 1838-1839.[8] His goal was simple. He wanted to learn as much as he could of the nation's native population, and then share this knowledge with a largely ignorant and unfeeling audience. To an extent, he was successful.[9] His Yonnondido, published in 1844 and his Legends of the Senecas, released in 1850, were read throughout the country with great interest.[10]

George Hosmer, William's father, was a distinguished lawyer in western New York.[11] This fact, probably more than anything else, influenced William's choice of professional careers.[12] After graduation from Geneva College in 1837, William joined his father's law office.[13] He married Stella Hinchman Avery of Owego, N. Y. on Oct. 16, 1838. For the next 16 years, he raised a family and practiced law in Avon, N. Y. From 1854 to 1858, he worked as a clerk in the New York custom house.[14] As the decade drew to a close, William's professional and personal life seemed to be on stable ground.

The 1860's brought hardship and tragedy to William H. C. Hosmer.[15] Soon after hostilities broke out in the Civil War, William worked tirelessly to raise volunteers in western New York.[16] On Nov. 12, 1862, William himself, at the advanced age of 48, enlisted as a private in the 26th Battery of New York Volunteers.[17] The reasons for this unusual action are unknown.[18] Although rejected by an army surgeon, William somehow managed to follow the battery to New Orleans. Once there, he joined General N. P. Banks's Red River expedition.[19] During his absence, one son, William Maxwell Hosmer, drowned[20] and another son, Charles Avery Hosmer, perished on May 3, 1863 at the Battle of Chancellorsville.[21] His wife, burdened with grief[22] and beset with disease[23], succumbed in 1864. When William returned to New York State, he was a broken man -- both in health and spirit. He was never quite the same again.[24] He wrote some, but his passion and drive lacked that of his youth.[25] Of his later years, we know little except that he died in Avon, N. Y. on May 23, 1877 -- 2 days before his 63rd birthday.[26]

A portion of W. H. C. Hosmer's poem, Rest, was inscribed over the entrance to a rural cemetery.[27] Its words reflect the torment and exhaustion of a troubled life. It is, therefore, a fitting tribute to its author.[28]

> Mortal heart was never stirred
> By a more emphatic word;
> One with deeper meaning fraught,
> Or the power to quicken thought;

Sermon, hymn and funeral lay,
Eloquence the soul to sway;
In four letters are compressed —
(Word that haunts a troubled breast),
"Rest".[29]

Note: There is some confusion on the identity of Edward Kellogg (#1170) and Edburgh Kellogg (#1176). They may have been, in fact, the same person. D. O. Kellogg, in his article, did not mention an "Edward", but did list an "Edburgh". Timothy Hopkins, on the other hand, in his book, listed an "Edward" but not an "Edburgh". Both sources, however, were in agreement that Ephraim Kellogg [Jr.] had six children -- three sons and three daughters. This would tend to support the position that Edward and Edburgh were, in reality, one and the same person.

[23]Family Information Sheets. Compiler: Rosalyn Grace (Lewis) Hayes. Date: 21 Mar. 1983. -- In the 1860 census for Porter, Ellen Hosmer (age 29) was listed as a, " ' domestic ' ", in the household of Peter Tower. (Ibid.). -- A minor child named, " ' Emaretta Hosmer ' ", (age 4) was also listed in this same household. (Ibid.).

[25]Ibid. -- In the 1865 state census, a Clara Higby was living in the household of Edward Hosmer. Mrs. Higby, Edward Hosmer's sister, was listed as a, " ' widow ' ". Her age was given as, 31 [1865 - 31 = 1834]. (Ibid.).

Lines: 3-8 (Listing Jane [sic] Hosmer and family). -- The census taker, apparently, transposed the names of Ellen and Jane, as the census return gave Jane - and not Ellen - as the head of household. The census taker also confused the ages of the members of this household: Jane Hosmer "60" [should be 25]; Ellen Hosmer "25" [should be 65]; Lewis C. Hosmer "20" [should be 14]; Clarissa "14" [should be 16]; Edwin "16" [should be 11]; Alvira "12" [correct].

[36]Family Information Sheets. Compiler: Rosalyn Grace (Lewis) Hayes. Date: 21 Mar. 1983. -- The 1865 New York State Census for Porter [Dwelling No.: 200] reported that " 'Edward ' " Hosmer was 27 years old [1865 - 27 = 1838]. Also listed in this household were his mother, Ellen Hosmer [age 70], his sister, Clara Higby [age 31], and his brother, Lewis C. Hosmer [age 29]. (Ibid.).

Samuel was buried next to his "unknown" brother. (Ibid.).

No marks of violence were found upon it and it is supposed that the deceased must have walked off the dock accidentally and drowned. An inquest will be held to-day.

My Dear Wife

I left New York 25th. June at 1½ o'c P.M. and arrived at the dock at this place at 3 o'c this morning, making the trip 10½ days. We were very much favored, had no rough weather, and very little head wind, and came along finely. There were about 65 Cabin & 280 Steerage passengers - I was not at all sick, took my meals regularly daily. We had some Companionable people aboard, 3 from Pittsburg - W.S. Clinton from Buffalo - and others from nearly every section of the world, among whom were a Gentleman & Lady from New Zeland returning home to this Country - Mr Joseph Tippett of this City has very kindly been showing me around the City today - Visited the Merchants Exchange, a very massive, richly ornamented, with expensive cutting of figures in stone &c, the most costly building for this purpose, in the Country - All the buildings here are substantial, chiefly stone, and of the most sobering character, owing to the use of Coal entirely for fuel, the building look dark and discolored - The streets are thoroughly well paved. The public carriages consist mostly of Cabriolets & Hansoms; also Omnibuses and a line of street railways. the latter have been introduced recently, under much opposition, but promise success - There are not many objects of interest here for those of pleasure seeking - The stone docks here for receiving Vessels - surpass all others of the kind in the world. They extend about 7 miles, and are indis-favorable, as the tide here has a rise and fall of 21 to 23 feet twice every 24 hours - This is the greatest shipping port in this part of the Globe, first in the World, Ocean Steamers are daily leaving here for nearly all parts of the world; - New York, Boston, Quebec, Halifax - France, Spain, Mediterranean, Australia, South America etc -

I expect to visit the Timber & Stave yards tomorrow - and leave here on Friday P.M. by Steamer to Glasgow Scotland, where I shall spend the Sabbath and proceed thence accross to the City of Edinburgh - thence south through the interior of England to London, where I purpose stopping 4 to 5 days and thence cross by Steamer to Rotterdam Holland, thence to Cologne up the fine Rhine one day east to Mayence, thence accross by Rail to Paris, arriving there latter part of July In case Spain is not too much agitated. I expect to go to Cadiz - Seville, Malaga, and other ports for fine clothing, I hope to get around back to Paris by the 15th to 20th August and ready to start Homeward via Havre by the 1st September perhaps earlier - I shall look for a letter from you at Paris, care of Messrs Munroe & Co - to reach there by the 1st August, also again by the 15th August on my return from Spain My health is good, and I shall try to keep so - I think of you and the Children and all I left behind, quite often, from whom I am now so widely separated, and I hope the kind Providence that hath watched over and protected me these four, and a half years past over me over there, in due time restore me to my dear Family & Friends at home, with love to you and the Children and Louise. I remain

Truly & faithfully
Yours
Gustavus

Death of Gustavus P. Hosmer

Scarcely had our community recovered from the shock of Judge Holmes' death as announced in Wednesday's JOURNAL, than it was suddenly called upon to mourn the taking away of another old and esteemed citizen.

Mr. Gustavus P. Hosmer died at his residence No. 148 East Avenue about 7 o'clock Wednesday night. Very few were prepared for the sad news. Mr. Hosmer had been ill but a few days comparatively and the fact was not generally known. He had been confined to the house only a week and at no time — not even the moment before dissolution was the worst feared by his family or friends. He was in bed with a troublesome indisposition and that seemed about all. Shortly before he died he was conversing with a neighbor when a sudden pallor came over his features and he passed peacefully away before assistance — which, however, would have been unavailing — could be secured. His heart had long been seriously affected and heart failure is given as the cause of the final stroke.

Gustavus Pomeroy Hosmer was born August 2d, 1819, at Avon, Livingston county, this State. He was consequently 72 years of age at the time of his death. He was at school in Avon and Batavia, in 1827-8, and finished his education at Canandaigua in 1835. In 1836, he moved with his father's family to this (Niagara) county. His father was one of the pioneers of Western New York. Naturally of a business turn of mind, Mr. Hosmer's energies were early turned in that direction. After leaving school he sought and obtained employment as a clerk in stores at Canandaigua, Rochester, Buffalo and Oswego. From the fall of 1839 till the spring of 1841 he was teller and bookkeeper in the Bank of Western New York at Rochester. He moved to Albany in 1841 and soon thereafter commenced for himself in the stave and lumber business. From a retail affair his business soon grew until he operated successfully in Northern Ohio, Western Pennsylvania and Michigan, and laid the foundation of a fortune. In Michigan he owned pine and oak lands and mills and for many years was a partner in vessels on the lakes. At this period of his life his goods found their way all over the Northern States and as far South as Baltimore and his business connections extended for many years to Portland, Me., with a firm who were largely engaged in sending shooks and cooperage stock to the West India markets and he shipped to many ports in Northern Europe, France, Spain and California.

OBITUARY - GUSTAVUS P. HOSMER

Later in life Mr. Hosmer was successfully engaged in the stave and lumber business at Tonawanda and Buffalo. He came to this city about 1858 and substantially retired from business, having accumulated large wealth by a life of honest industry united to rare good judgment. But while no longer engaged in active and regular business, Mr. H. still continued interested in all such matters. He thoroughly understood the laws of trade and was naturally a large operator. His investments were judicious and in the field of legitmate speculation few excelled him in wise forecast of the future. As a result Mr. Hosmer while quite a large owner of real estate in Lockport, was also heavily interested in various investments, enterprises &c., in many states of the Union. With it all he maintained a character for straightforward dealings and unimpeachable integrity. He was a self-made man and his accumulations were simply the inevitable result of probity united to a natural aptitude for large business transactions all enforced by practical common sense. He was not a visionary man. In all the affairs of life – business or otherwise – he acted upon practical lines. He insisted upon knowing the whys and wherefores and as freely gave his own reasons to others for any opinion he might have formed. In his long and active business life he occasionally met with reverses almost without exception brought about by others interested with him in ventures, but such mishaps he always met uncomplainingly and honorably.

We have thus somewhat detailed Mr. Hosmer's career as a business man because he was really out of the ordinary in that regard. He ranked with those who inaugurate and carry to conclusion great business enterprises and successfully keep their touch upon the commercial pulse of the world.

[The paragraph on Mr. Hosmer's church and philanthropic activities has been omitted for reasons of space]

Mr. Hosmer was twice married. He was first udited [sic] to Miss Mary C. Johnson at Albany, Nov. 18, 1841. They had five children, Henry and Robert who died and Messrs. Arthur L. Hosmer and Gustavus P. Hosmer, Jr., who reside at St. Josephs, Mo., and Mrs. J. D. Emerson of Nyack, N. Y. His wife died at the early age of 39 years. He was subsequently married to Miss Mary E. Boilean [sic] (who survies him) at Meadville, Pa. October 2, 1861. The only child of this marriage is Miss Harriet A. Hosmer of this city. All the surviving family have the sympathy of the community.

MRS. HOSMER, 81, DIES IN GRAND RAPIDS LAST WEEK.

CAME TO MANCELONA IN THE SPRING OF 1882

Had Lived with Daughter Since Death of Her Husband.

Rachel Elmil Lusk Hosmer died in Grand Rapids, Wednesday, Jan. 28th, 1925, aged 81 years, 5 months, 18 days. She was born at Hartland, Niagara Co., N. Y., August 10th, 1843. She was united in marriage to Timothy Hosmer of Hartland, N. Y., on Jan. 2, 1861. They had six children born to them, three of whom are still living. They are Mrs. Lillian Hoffman of Grand Rapids, Wm. A. Hosmer of Detroit and Frank T. Hosmer of Mancelona. Besides her children she is survived by eleven grand children and one great grand child.

Mrs. Hosmer came with her husband to Mancelona in the spring of 1882, settling on a farm 2½ miles west of Antrim. After her husband's death, Feb. 4th, 1911, she came to live with her daughter, Mrs. Lillian Hoffman in Mancelona, going with her daughter, September, 1923, to Grand Rapids where she remained until her translation.

She and her husband celebrated their golden wedding on Jan. 2nd, 1911, at the home of their son, Wm. A. Hosmer, having been married 50 years.

Mrs. Hosmer was converted and baptised under the labor of Rev. Joseph Coles and on April 27, 1915, she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church. She was a good mother, a kind and friendly neighbor, always ready to help the needy and oppressed. Her sunny disposition and good character endeared her to all who knew her intimately.

Private funeral services were conducted by Rev. James Hailwood at 4 p. m., Friday, Jan. 30, in Grand Rapids. Her son, Wm. A. Hosmer, accompanied the body to Mancelona, where interment was made in the family lot in Fairview cemetery.

(The Author). Note: It is interesting that John choose the navy. His grandfather, Zechariah Hosmer Jr. [1762-1856], served in the navy during the American Revolution.

THE "CONGDON" SURNAME

- Origin -

The name is native to England. There is some indication that the name originated in the south, possibly Cornwall.[1] The name also appeared in Wales.[2]

- Movement -

It was in the small colony of Rhode Island that the surname -- CONGDON -- first appeared in America. Benjamin Congdon (1650 - 1718), perhaps the first of his surname to cross the Atlantic, settled in Narragansett, Rhode Island prior to 1672.[3] Many of his descendants chose to remain in Rhode Island, with the largest concentrations centering around the towns of North Kingstown and South Kingstown.[4] Benjamin's son, John Congdon, was one of the few members of the family to leave the home colony early. Sometime during the period 1710 to 1720, John moved his family to Connecticut.[5] Thus, by the beginning of the 18th century, the Congdon name was flourishing in 2 colonies -- Rhode Island and Connecticut.[6]

- Meaning & Derivation -

1. Congdon = A person who came from Congdon [king's hill] (a place in Cornwall) -- English[7]
2. Congdon = "King's hill" -- Old English. Derived from Cong -, meaning, "king" * + dūn, meaning, "hill".[8]

* It is interesting to note that the first part of this name, Cong - bears a remarkable similarity to the Old Norse word, konungr.[9] Whether an actual connection exists between the two or not is still a matter of speculation.[10]

[first part of name]

3. cyning = " 'a man of noble birth' " -- Old English
4. cyng = king -- Old English[11]
5. cyng (a contraction of cyning) -- Anglo Saxon [Old English][12]
6. kyng(e) = king -- Middle English[13]
7. cynn = kin -- Old English[14]

[second part of name]

8. dūn = hill -- Old English[15]
9. dun = hill -- Middle English[16]

- Evolution -

The exact nature of the evolutionary changes in the name (orthographic or otherwise) is largely unknown. Few facts exist.[18] The name is composed of two distinct parts: Cong - , from the Old English words for king, cyng and cyning[19]; and, - don, from the Old English word for hill, dūn.† The second portion of the name may be related, in some way, to the Sanskrit word, dhanvan, meaning, seashore, dry land.

† The Modern English word, "down" [Example: Churchill Downs], followed a similar evolutionary path [dūn (Old English) → dun (Middle English → doun → down]. Both "down" and " - don" came from the Old English word, dūn.[20]

THE "ASH" SURNAME

- Origin -

The noun, ash , from which this surname is derived, is a word of great antiquity. Indeed, it may predate the development of writing itself.[1] Judging from its Indo-European roots, the word probably had its origin somewhere in Western Asia or the subcontinent of India.[2] The fact that it has survived so long, in its various monosyllabic forms, may be due, in part, to its strong association to several early creationistic epics.[3] The researcher and critical Biblical scholar, Lloyd Graham reported that the ash tree played an important role in the Hindu story of creation. He wrote:

> The Hindus pictured Creation as a tree, Ashvatta, with its roots in the Absolute and its branches (seven planes) hanging downward. From this word, Ashvatta, we see where the others got their ash tree,....

Mr. Graham also noted that the Greeks believed that it was Zeus who made the three races of man and that the last of these he created from ash trees.[4]

The mythological connection between creation and the ash tree is not confined to the hot and humid climates of India and Greece, one can also find it in the legends of the far North.[5] In Norse mythology, the Gods, Odin, Hœner, and Loder, made the first man, Ask, from the ash tree[6], and they held their court under the branches of this "tree of life", which they called, Ygdrasil.[7] Even the Biblical book of Genesis mentions the "tree of life", although it does not identify it as to genus.

> And out of the ground made the LORD God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil.[8]

> But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.[9]

Down through the centuries, many ancient cultures believed that ash was a "powerful defense" against all manner of real and imagined threats -- from diseases and poisonous animals to witches and fairies.[10] Perhaps, it was because of these "special powers" that the word has come down to us. There can be no doubt that this tree held a special fascination to the ancients, a fascination which they passed on to succeeding generations. From the modern study of etymology, we can see how truly successful these ancients were in this regard.[11]

- Indo-European Roots -

askesk-
osk-[12]

- Meaning & Derivation -

1. æsc = "dweller by the ash-tree" - Old English[13]
2. Æsc = An Anglo Saxon personal name. Literally, the name meant, "ash". Its use as a personal name, however, acquired the more figurative meaning -- "spear". The connection between the two, stemmed from the fact that the shafts of early English spears were fashioned from the wood of the ash [æsc] tree.[14]
3. Ash (or) Nash = local place name[15]
4. Ash = "ash" (English tree of the same name)[16]
5. Ash(e) = "ash tree" - Old English. A local place name found in seven English counties.[17]
6. Ash, Ashe = "Dweller near an ash tree" - English[18]

From its Indo-European beginnings, the word has always meant or been associated with the ash tree[19] [genus, Fraxinus].[20] Few words in the English language, or, for that matter, any modern language, has had such a direct link to its historic roots. Similarly, its orthography has changed little since the adoption of the Latin alphabet. It has retained its monosyllabic form and has kept its essential sound.[21]

- Movement -

The word spread from its point of origin in Western Asia and radiated through most of Europe.[22] The orthographic similarities between the various modern European languages - particularly in the Teutonic branch - would tend to support this hypothesis (see: Modern Foreign Equivalents).[23]

- Evolution -

From a simple noun denoting a specific genus of tree,[24] the word slowly acquired additional applications.[25] As a place name, it was used to designate areas where ash trees grew.[26] Later, as populations increased, its meaning was expanded to include those individuals who lived in or around areas where ash trees flourished.[27] As an English personal name, it appeared as early as the fifth century (see: Historical Occurrences).[28] By the 13th and 14th centuries, it was in use in both Worcestershire and Sussex. The transition from personal name to surname occurred during this period.[29]

The orthographic changes in England have been remarkably minor. In the early years, the name employed the Old English letter, "Æ" (example: Æsc).[30] During the Middle Ages, the name began with either the letter, "E" (example: Eshe, Eysse) or the letter "A" (example: Asche, Aysse, Ayssh etc.). Like most names in Medieval England, spellings were never uniform. Later, these 2 basic forms were to spawn a plethora of related variants or offshoots - many of which still exist today (see: Related Surnames). These offshoots along with the basic root forms, from which they stem, are monosyllabic and share two general endings: -sh(e), -ch(e) [see: Historical Occurrences].[31]

> ... died at his residence in the town of Porter aforesaid on the 13th day of August 1842 of a natural death.

(Petition - Caleb Ash, Executor of [Rev.] George Ash's will to H. A. Carter, Surrogate of Niagara County, N. Y. Dated: 22 Jan. 1844).

> And the work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance for ever. -- Isaiah 32:17

(Letter, Mildred Middleton to Ronald Roberts, June 15, 1973).

★ Rev. George Ash may have had a brother -- James Ash. The 1820 census for Porter listed James Ash [born between 1775 and 1794], his wife, and 9 children [5 boys and 4 girls]. It is interesting to note that in this census the listing of James Ash appears directly above that of Nathan Ash [George Ash's son]. This fact suggests that James and Nathan lived next to one another in 1820, and that they were related in some manner [possibly, uncle-nephew]. The final settlement of executorship of George Ash's estate listed five persons whose relationship to George Ash Sr. is unclear: Olieph Ash; Joseph W. Ash; Elizabeth A. Ash; Hiram L. Ash; and, Samantha Ash. Possibly, these individuals were James Ash's children.

¶ Cynthia died at the age of 64 years, 11 months, and 23 days. Working from her date of death [29 Sept. 1844], it would appear that she was born on or about 6 Oct. 1779.

GEORGE ASH
(1777 - 1842)

Rev. George Ash was a complex and dynamic individual who left a distinctive and indelible mark on frontier Niagara. From a spiritual as well as a secular point of view, Rev. Ash was a guiding force for stability in the area.[1] His strong religious convictions led to the formation of organized religion in the county.[2] His sense of community helped to nurture and to protect a vulnerable population that was, literally, at the very edge of civilization. Menaced by both the Indians and the British, George Ash aided his neighbors and helped them to persevere in times of tragedy and stress.[3] Of course, the viability of Porter and the surrounding communities was not due to the efforts of any one individual, but the contributions made by Rev. Ash were significant and enduring.

Exactly when George Ash arrived in Niagara County, N. Y. is still a matter of conjecture[4], local records indicate that he was living in Wilson as early as 1810.[5] It is possible that he came to Niagara County from Canada[6], as at least one of his children was born there.[7] His activities during this early period are not recorded, but it is known that he purchased a farm in Porter[8], probably around 1812.[9] According to one local history, this farm was located near the mouth of Four Mile Creek.[10]

The War of 1812 brought much destruction and loss of life to the inhabitants of Niagara County. In December 1813, the British, along with their Indian allies, captured Fort Niagara. Their raids into the countryside, following their incursion, were particularly severe and many of the settlers' homes were pillaged and burned. Fear swept the area and scores of American settlers fled to safer areas in the east.[11] It was during this troubled period that George Ash demonstrated his uncommon courage in the face of determined opposition.

The days preceding the British attack were full of foreboding and uncertainty. The Americans knew well of their vulnerability, and the prudent among them took appropriate precautions against the inevitable.[12] For his part, George Ash moved his family to the home of his friend, Reuben Wilson. Mr. Wilson's home was farther east than Rev. Ash's residence and, therefore, it was considered more secure. While the personal safety of his family was paramount in his mind, the security of his property in Porter was also of grave concern to him.[13] On Dec. 13, 1813, the day the British assaulted Fort Niagara[14], George Ash left Wilson's house and rode out on horseback to check on his farm in Porter. About six miles west of Wilson's home, George stumbled upon a British raiding party. The encounter came as a total surprise, and George's horse, unmounted at the time, bolted and disappeared into the wilderness. Fortunately for George, the British were completely unaware of the commotion so near them. George, now on foot, raced home to warn his friends of the imminent British arrival.[15] According to one source, George Ash's presence of mind and, " . . . forthright courage . . . saved his neighbors from much destruction of life and property".[16]

Among those who heeded George's timely warning was Reuben Wilson, Jr. who hastily rounded up all the cattle he could find and drove them down the lake. This 15 year old successfully eluded the British and saved his small herd.[17] His father, however, was not so lucky. A troop of British soldiers, under the command of Captain Scott, arrested Reuben Wilson Sr. The British officer released the elder Mr. Wilson shortly after his arrest, with his solemn promise that he would confine himself to his home until their return. Captain Scott, described as a humane officer, did not wish to aggravate the Americans' already precarious situation. He could see the desperate conditions of the area and realized any additional action on the part of the British could be disastrous for the civilian population. Nevertheless, Captain Scott was under orders to destroy everything of value. In an effort to resolve this dilemma, Captain Scott sent George Ash and an orderly sergeant to the British fort to plead the settlers' case. It was Captain Scott's hope that these emissaries could convince his superior to rescind or, at least, modify his original orders. Unfortunately, their arguments fell on deaf ears. George Ash was taken prisoner and the sergeant was ordered to return to his company. Captain Scott, for his part, was instructed to follow his orders to the letter.[18] How long George Ash remained a British prisoner is unknown, but it was probably less than a fortnight.[19] Although Rev. Ash's mission of mercy was a failure, his efforts were not totally fruitless. The time between his departure from Mr. Wilson's to his arrival at the British fort, delayed the full implementation of Captain Scott's orders. This delay, no doubt, saved property and lives.

The period immediately following the war was a time of rebuilding. It was also a time to repair the terrible remnants of war, both psychological and physical.[20] After a period of readjustment, confidence was again restored and the people went about the business of living. With the building of the Erie Canal and the return of security to the area, new settlers flooded into the county. Prosperity, once again, seemed within reach.[21] George Ash, ever mindful of his responsibilities to the community, took on additional duties. At the Porter town meeting of April 6, 1819, held at the home of Peter Tower, George Ash was appointed one of the three assessors for the area.[22] His fairness and unquestioned honesty were well known and his appointment was well received in the community.

One of the great loves of George Ash's life was the ministry. He devoted almost all his entire adult life to the spreading of the gospel.[23] "Preacher Ash", as he was affectionately known to his flock[24], began his religious career in Niagara County as a circuit-rider. He travelled throughout the county, stopping by houses, barns, schoolhouses, open fields, or wherever believers congregated.[25] His services were simple affairs, befitting the frontier area in which they occurred. Despite the lack of physical facilities, Rev. Ash's duties were similar to other clergymen of the period, who had established churches. He married couples, baptized children, officiated at funerals, and counseled the troubled. He was a Methodist, but he attended the needs of all who required his services.[26]

A great change in the religious life of the community came about sometime after the war when Olive Beach walked to the home of Rev. Ash. The circumstances of that meeting were recorded in an 1878 local history:

> Olive Beach ... was a pioneer in religious missionary work. At a time when there were no religious services within distance to be reached, she walked through the woods from the home of her father, Aaron Beach, on the North Ridge, to the mouth of Four-mile creek (ten miles), to procure a minister to form a class of the small number of Methodists that could be collected for the purpose. The services of the Rev. Mr. Ash were available, and he organized the first class that existed in the county.[27]

The first class of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the town of Porter was organized about 1821. The original congregation numbered only fourteen. Lacking a structure of their own, the members of this small group routinely met at the home of their first pastor, Rev. George Ash. As the years passed, the class grew in size, but it was not until 1852 -- 10 years after Rev. Ash's death -- that the organization erected its own church in Porter.[28] Rev. Ash may have also played a role in the establishment of the Methodist Episcopal Church on North Ridge.[29] His friend and long time supporter, Olive Beach, lived on North Ridge.[30] It is logical that these two friends and church organizers would have worked together towards the church's erection.[31] According to one local history, the cobblestone North Ridge Church was built in 1845[32], three years after Rev. Ash's passing. Although he never saw the final result of his labor, the seeds he sowed eventually bore fruit.

As one might expect, the demands on the time of a country preacher were, occasionally, heavy. Despite these mental and physical pressures, the occupation also had its rewards. Perhaps Rev. Ash's most satisfying work came when it involved members of his own family. Although records are lacking, it is quite probable that he officiated at the weddings of his children and took part in the baptisms of many of his grandchildren.[33]

Death came to Rev. Ash on Aug. 13, 1842. He was 65 years old.[34] According to a statement made by his son Caleb, Rev. Ash died at his residence of natural causes.[35] The inscription on his tombstone, from The Book of the Prophet Isaiah, better than anything else summarizes the reward of a life devoted to others:

> And the work of righteousness > shall be peace; and the effect of > righteousness quietness and > assurance for ever.[36]

(Celebrating The 100th Anniversary of the Village of Wilson, New York. [1958]. n. p.). -- The Methodist Episcopal preacher referred to, in the two sources above, may well have been Rev. George Ash as he was a close friend of the town's most prominent citizen - Reuben Wilson Sr. (The Author).

the marriage of his granddaughter, Angeline Ash [daughter of George Ash Jr.] and Stephen Hosmer. (Letter, Mildred (Hosmer) Maue to Ronald Roberts, Mar. 17, 1972). -- This is clearly in error as Angeline Ash was only 11 years old at the time of her grandfather's death. This is an example of how "family stories" become confused through the years. It is more likely that Rev. Ash officiated at the marriage of his children. (The Author).

Porter, Niagara County, New York State. Witnesses: Festus Burr, Hiram Bradley, Allen Cole). -- This is interesting because Rev. Ash was not illiterate. His duties as a minister required that he read from the Good Book, write sermons, and fill out the necessary religious forms (marriage and baptismal certificates etc.). Rev. Ash was also one of the town's assessors. In view of this, it seems highly unlikely that Rev. Ash was illiterate. A more plausible explanation for the "X" signature was that he was too ill to sign his name in longhand. (The Author).

THE "KITTREDGE" SURNAME

- Origin -

There is some confusion as to the place of origin.[1] Some experts trace its origin to Scotland where it appeared as a personal name.[2] Other specialists in the field believe that the front portion of the name had its origins in Scandinavia.

- Meaning & Derivation -

1. Cytelric = Composite of Ketill, "(sacrificial) caldron" -- Old Norse + the common ending, -ric -- Old English.[3]

2. Kittridge, Kittredge = "The son of Sitreac or Sitrig" (meaning, 'true victory') -- Scottish.

- Movement -

If one accepts the definition, "son of Sitreac or Sitrig", the name, it would seem, moved south from Scotland.[4] If one accepts the "composite" theory, the name, or at least the Old Norse root, followed Viking routes of invasion.[5] Whichever is the case, it is certain that by the 14th century, the surname appeared in Essex and by the 16th century in Suffolk.[6] Its appearance in America came in the middle of the 17th century. According to one source, all those in this country today who bear the KITTREDGE/KITTRIDGE surname can trace their descent to one John Kittredge[7], who came to America around 1660 and settled in [Old] Billerica, Massachusetts.[8] By the end of the 18th century, his descendants had taken the name to New Hampshire and Vermont.[9] If John Kittredge was, in fact, the first and only person of this name to come to colonial America, then this would account for the relative scarcity of the name in the United States today.[10]

- Evolution -

Those who subscribe to the "crossbreed" theory see the name as a merger of Old Norse and Old English forms. According to this line of thinking, Ketill, the Old Norse root, was anglicized to, Cytel, and this, eventually, evolved into Kitel from which Kittredge is said to have stemmed. The Old English suffix, -ric [Cytelric], which completed the hybridization, later became the familiar endings, -redge and ridge.† [24]

† Note: This suffix transformation was by no means unique to this surname. Many pre-conquest names evolved in a similar fashion, for example: Aelfric (Old English) = Allridge (Modern English); Aethelric (Old English) = Aldridge (Modern English); Cuthric (Old English) = Cutteridge (Modern English); Ealdric (Old English) = Oldridge (Modern English); Godric (Old English) = Goodridge

(Modern English); Wulfric (Old English) = Woolridge (Modern English).[25]

[13]Kittredge. The Kittredge Family. 1936. p. 6. Concerning the life and arrival of John Kittredge Sr., we know that he was originally a ship's captain who was forced to flee his native England. Captain Kittredge had long been interested in medicine and this interest would eventually force his departure. Regarding his obsession with the medical arts, Mabel Kittredge wrote:

> He began experimenting by breaking animal's [sic] limbs; then setting them, seeing how fast he could get them to heal. One of his men broke an arm, and the Captain set it. Soon after this another man broke a leg, and asked the Captain to set it for him. The Captain said he would, 'If he would take a room and place himself entirely in his care'; which he did. (Ibid., pp. 4, 5).

Captain Kittredge's fame as a healer spread, and he was called upon, time after time, to help those in need. The fact that he lacked a medical degree did not particularly concern his patients. The English authorities, however, were not so charitable. Practicing medicine without a medical diploma was a crime and, as such, Captain Kittredge was subject to arrest. With his liberty at stake, Captain Kittredge decided to leave his native land forever. He came to America and settled in Billerica, Mass. on Sept. 25, 1660. (Ibid., pp. 4, 5). -- John Kittredge Sr. was probably born in Oulton or Lowestoft, county Sussex, England. He married Mary Littlefield, daughter of Francis and Jane (Hill) Littlefield of Wells, Maine, on 14 Dec. 1646. He passed away in Billerica, Mass. on 18 Oct. 1676. (Ibid., p. 6; *N. E. My dear Mrs. Hosmer,

I thank you for your letter of June 25th. relative to the Hosmer family. You people apparently have been in Wilson + Tonawanda, N.Y. I have a letter from Sumner B. Hosmer, ✻ born in Tonawanda, N.Y., I think he said that he was b. in Tonawanda, + that some of his family lived in Wilson, + that his grand father was Sylvester. This makes it look as though the two families were intimately related. Possibly you may know of this man. I am anxious to trace all these people back to the first Hosmers in America.

Enclosed are some data sheets for this record. If you could fill them out I should be greatly obliged. If ya have any hint as to the parentage of Sylvester, or if ya discover anything I should be glad to learn of it.

APPENDIX II

POETRY OF

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Shy, unobtrusive bird! thou art
  An emblem, beautiful and meet,
Of the poor poet's weary heart
  That loves in solitude to beat –
A lofty heart that finds relief,
  And inspiration deep and strong,
When closeted with gloom and grief,
  Its chords grow tremulous with song.

-- WILLIAM H. C. HOSMER

(The Wood-Thrush)

THE POETRY
(1814 - 1877)

The poetry of William Howe Cuyler Hosmer reflects in many ways, the sensitivity, complexity and immense diversity of the poet himself. Born and reared in the frontier of Western New York, this remarkable man knew more than most of the hardships and rigors faced by Easterners coming West. His empathy for these hardy individuals, however, never dampened or diminished his respect and admiration for those who held the land before the White Man. Schooled by his mother, at a tender age, William mastered several Indian tongues and learned the richness of the Indian culture from first-hand experience. From campfires and council meetings, this budding poet gained a lifelong appreciation for the traditions, legends and customs of America's native inhabitants. His numerous works on Indian themes illustrate, quite clearly, how significant these early encounters were to the development of his unique writing style. Even his reverential treatment of nature can be traced to the Indians' simple symbiotic relationship with the land.

His nature poetry is remarkable in that it lacks the bitterness or recrimination so often associated with the advocates of nature. His emphasis is on the timelessness of nature and the infinite wisdom of its Creator. Man's ignorance is mentioned only in passing and then only in the most gentle of terms. Nature, not man, is the key to these works.

William H. C. Hosmer, like his contemporaries, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Henry David Thoreau, John James Audubon, George Catlin and Thomas Cole, all were part of the great spiritual and artistic movement called, "American Romanticism". Whether poet or painter, they recognized, almost intuitively, the uniqueness of America. Unlike Europe, this new continent defied traditional explanation -- it followed no set pattern. This was a new order. Through the elevation and adoration of nature, these gentlemen of the arts sought to lift and enrich the spirit of man. In the process, they also helped to assert America's national identity.

Certainly, as an observer of nature, there can be little doubt that William H. C. Hosmer possessed an unusual ability to describe the creatures and wonders of the world around him. His works are as fresh and full of insight today as when they were written almost 140 years ago. The following selections amply demonstrate his extraordinary literary skill. An unabashed lover of nature, William Howe Cuyler Hosmer represented the best of his time.

BIRD-NOTES

- Prelude -

The stork in heaven knoweth
  Her own appointed time,
And like an arrow goeth
  Back to our colder clime;
The turtle, crane, and swallow
  Come, on unerring wing,
When northern hill and hollow
  Bask in the light of spring.

But we, endowed with reason,
  Cannot foreknow the hour —
The sweet, appointed season
  For bursting of Hope's flower;
When near the glad fruition
  Of toil that worked annoy —
When sorrow's drear condition
  Gives place to heart-felt joy

Lo! blighting frost encroaches
  On Autumn's sad domain,
And Winter wild approaches
  To end his feeble reign:

The birds of passage gather
  And fly across the wave,
Their guide a Heavenly Father,
  Omnipotent to save.

But man, with reason gifted,
  Cannot the hour foreknow
When Hope's bright curtain lifted
  Reveals a waste of woe;
When clouds send lightning flashes
  Our idols to consume,
And dreams, resolved to ashes,
  Are scattered on his tomb.

- Winter Birds -

When the last red leaves have disappeared,
And icicles hang from December's beard,
Through the naked woods I love to stroll,
While the leaden clouds above me roll.

Though the landscape wears a frosty dress
I feel not a sense of loneliness,
For chirping voices on the breeze,
Come from the mossy bolls of trees.

The titmouse, restless little bird!
Tapping the mouldering bark, is heard;
His nimble figure ill-descried
On the beechen trunk's opposing side.

And "Picus minor" plies his trade,
Hunting for dens by insects made;
Knocking off flakes of dropping wood
To pound with his hammer their loathsome brood.

Snow on the blast is whirling by,
But "chink! chink!" is his cheerful cry;
What cares he for the blinding storm?
Both have their mission to perform.

The farmer, lacking wisdom, hears
Thy shrilly note with idle fears;
Growling, while sounds each measured rap,
"Death to the robber that bores for sap!"

Toward thee he should be kind of heart,
For a guardian of his trees thou art;
Thou leavest not a grub alive,
And after thy visits they better thrive.

The gray elm, shorn of his leafy crown,
Finds a loyal friend in the Creeper brown,
Hunting for vermin in crevices dark,
That health may return to the wounded bark.

"Quank! quank!" the Nuthatch sings,
As his horny bill on the white-oak rings;
Ill will the bug and spider fare,
For a spear-like tongue explores their lair.

The rain that freezes as it falls,
Drives not him from the forest-halls;
Though stem and twig are with ice encased,
His note still rings through the wintry waste.

From the larger boughs I have seen him launch
To the swaying tip of the lightest branch,
Then round it track his spiral way,
Probing the spots of old decay.

Blithe little birds of winter wild!
I loved ye when a happy child;
Now manhood's beard is on my chin,
But draughts of delight from ye I win.

Ye are links that bind me to the past,
That realm enchanted, dim and vast;
And my paths through the dreary, drifting snow,
Ye cheered in the winters of long ago.

May ill befall the man or boy,
Who one of your number would destroy!
Ye are never false to your native bowers —
Ye are doers of good in this world of ours.

- The Crow -

Their icy drums the polar spirits beat,
  And dark December with a howl awakes;
But on I wander, while beneath my feet
  The brittle snow-crust breaks.

The fleecy flock to find one juicy blade
  Scrape, with their lifted hoofs, the snow away;
Ended the long, loud bleat of joy that made
  So blithe the meads of May.

With wildly mournful bellowing around
  Yon fence-girt stack the hungry cattle crowd;

For the drear skies on their old pasture-ground
  Have dropped a heavy shroud.

Housed in some hollow beech the squirrel lies,
  Scared by the whistling winds that scourge
                                the wold;]
The hardy fox is not a-foot, too wise
  To brave the bitter cold.

Far in the gloomy cedar-swamp to-day
  The ruffed grouse finds a shelter from the storm,]
And, fearless grown, the quail-flock wend their way]
  To barns for cover warm.

One bird alone, the melancholy crow
  Answers the challenge of the surly north;
The forest-tops are swinging to and fro,
  But boldly goes he forth.

His pinions flapping like a banner-sheet,
  While high he mounts above the forest tall,
Shake from their iron quills the pelting sleet
  With measured rise and fall.

The sinning Court of Bards an evil name
  On the poor creature long ago conferred;
It was a lying judgment, and I claim
  Reversal for the bird.

I know that with a hoarse, insulting croak,
  When planting time arrives and winds are warm,
On the dry antlers of some withered oak
  He perches safe from harm.

I know that he disturbs the buried maize,
  And infant blades upspringing on the hills;
That man a snare to catch the robber lays,
  While wrath his bosom fills.

But is he not of service to our race,
  Performing his allotted labor well?
Although a bounty on his head we place —
  The rifle-crack his knell.

Warned is the reaper of foul weather nigh,
  When the prophetic creature, in its flight,
With a changed note in its discordant cry,
  Moves like a gliding kite.

While louder grows that wild, presageful call,
  Sheaves are piled high upon the harvest wain,
And the stack neatly rounded ere the fall
  Of hail, and driving rain.

Be just, then, farmer, and the grudge forget
  Nursed in thy bosom long against the bird;
Thy crop would have been ruined by the wet
  Had not that voice been heard.

Health-officer of nature, he will speed,
  Croaking a signal to his sable band,
And dine on loathsome offals, ere they breed
  Contagion in the land.

When the round nest his dusk mate deftly weaves,
  He sits, a warrior in his leafy tent;
And the fierce hawk prompt punishment receives
  If near, or mischief bent: —

Thus at the door-sill, guarding babes and wife,
  The dauntless settler met his painted foe;
Love giving, in a dark, unequal strife,
  Destruction to his blow.

He is no summer coxcomb of the air,
  Forsaking ancient friends in evil hour,
To find a home where Heaven is ever fair,
  And the glad Earth in flower.

Though man and boy a warfare with him wage,
  He loves the forest where he first waved wing;
Awaiting in its depths, though winter rage,
  The bright return of spring.

That love is noblest that survives the bloom
  Of withered cheeks that once out-blushed
                                the rose;]
True to its fading object in the gloom
  Of life's dull wintry close: —

And the poor Crow, of that pure love a type,
  Quits not the wood in which he burst the shell,
Though fall the leaves, and feathered armies pipe
  To the chill North farewell!

EDWIN NEWTON HOSMER'S CIVIL WAR JOURNAL

Omnia sunt misera in bellis civilibus.

All things are wretched in civil wars.

(Epistolæ ad Familiares, Book iv, epis. 9)

EDWIN NEWTON HOSMER'S CIVIL WAR DIARY

- Introduction -

Few periods in our national experience have so shaken and tested the will and mettle of the republic's inhabitants as the Civil War. As a consequence of that devastating conflict, the abomination of slavery was once and forever put to rest. Likewise, the concepts of planter paternalism and states' rights were severely restricted and put into their proper perspective. This era was, in many ways, America's coming of age. From that chaotic period emerged a nation stronger and more self-confident -- a nation bent on seeking the best from its people.

Historians and other academics have long delighted in examining the causes and repercussions of that fratricidal nightmare. No details - however small - have escaped their deliberate and, at times, ponderous scrutiny and analysis. Certainly, our current understanding of that period is due, in no small measure, to the dedicated efforts of generations of professional investigators. While acknowledging our debt to the academic community, we must also remember the men and women who actually lived through those turbulent years. The mementos and photographs, they so carefully preserved, have given us an invaluable physical and visual record of our past. Their letters and journals have given us rare insight into their feelings and perceptions of reality. As one might expect, these personal remembrances are full of the ordinary -- events not unlike the ones that concern us today. Weather, friends, money, social events, health problems, and personal conflicts were all frequent topics. Of course, these were not the only points committed to paper. The monumental events of the day, as well as, their own hopes and fears figured prominently in their writings. Behind it all, however, was a strong and unrelenting religious undercurrent that colored almost everything. Perhaps, it was this unbending faith in a power greater than themselves that allowed them to persevere in a time of great national calamity and personal uncertainty.

A soldier's thoughts are, it is said, often a confusing mixture of discordant threads. Hopes and fears abound. At one time, he is oblivious to the pain and suffering that surrounds him while, at another moment, he is overcome by the beauty and intricacy of nature. From detached observer to passionate advocate, things and events are seen in bold colors with a clarity and degree of certainty rarely matched in later years. The Civil War journal below was written by Edwin Newton Hosmer (1841-1916). This young man enlisted in the Union Army and entered the war with little knowledge of the world beyond his own doorstep. His brothers, Allen and A. B. Hosmer, had likewise joined. Despite his own inexperience, he seemed to have known instinctively that the events that were about to unfold would forever alter his own perceptions of the world. We are fortunate, indeed, that he chose to commit his personal observations and thoughts to paper and to share his own unique experiences with future generations.

Any person who has ever served his country in time of war will recognize, at once, the feelings of loneliness, anger, and frustration that young Edwin felt. In many ways, times have changed little. From the many mindless bureaucratic bumblings to the army's own inane policy of "hurry up and wait", we see, first hand, the absurdities of war. We also note, with some regret, that the silly rituals, petty intrigues, and political posturings of both officers and politicians have changed little through the years. Perhaps, it is this sense of timelessness and youthful innocence that makes this journal so appealing to the modern mind.

For this journal, we are indebted to Mr. Clark L. Hosmer who carefully transcribed and preserved his grandfather's words. Concerning the journal itself, Mr. Hosmer wrote:

> Edwin's diary was among Louise Clark's effects when she was cared for by Mrs. D. Cantine of Truman, Mn[.], in Aunt Lu's last years. Mrs. Cantine's son, Keith, sent the diary to me at my request.
> The handwriting in the diary varies in clarity from mostly easy to rarely impossible to read. ... Over the hundred plus years, some place names changed in spelling or do not show in our Rand Mc Nally Atlas.

Because of the length of the original manuscript, portions of that journal have, through necessity, been edited for this work. It is hoped that these deletions have not materially altered the substance or flavor of young Edwin's recollections.

Saturday, April 1, 1865
Over 200 Rebel deserters came in today. The Company raised money to purchase our 1st Lieutenant a sash to replace one stolen from him at St Paul.

Sunday, April 2, 1865
Allen went to Sanitary Hospital. The sword belt and sash were presented to the Captain and the sash to the Lieutenant by the Orderly, J. W. Place in a short and appropriate speech. They responded in a few words accepting and thanking the Co, etc. Distributed our guns.

Monday, April 3, 1865
Drew our shelter tents. News reached us that Petersburg and Richmond are taken. Great Rejoicing. Flags fly. Long guns firing, etc. Allen a little better.

Tuesday, April 4, 1865
Left Washington about 1 PM on board a large transport, name forgotten. Think Washington rather poorly built. If it were not for the public buildings it would be rather below par.

Wednesday, April 5, 1865
Arrived at Fortress Monroe. Saw the Rip Rebs all the way from Washington to the Fortress is well fortified. We saw several large guns. Entered Petersburg in PM. Rebs left Sunday night.

Thursday, April 6, 1865
We camped last night on the open field for the first time. This place looks desolate. Yesterday we crossed the defenses of Petersburg. They looked to us impregnable. They were composed of ditches, dens, sharpened sticks, earth works, and everything enginuity could invent.

Friday, April 7, 1865
Left our camp for the front. While waiting for the cars, had the pleasure of seeing and cheering President Lincoln and lady at Petersburg. Heard a report that Lee and 15,000 of his men are captured, did not leave Petersburg today waiting for the cars.

Saturday, April 8, 1865
Cars failed to come. We started on foot for Berksville, distance about 60 miles. Marched about 20 miles today. A severe day for raw troops. Allen went to the hospital in Petersburg yesterday.

Sunday, April 9, 1865
Rations beginning to fail. Passed 1700 reb prisoners in one drove shortly after passed 8260 more encamped for dinner. General Ewell and Custer Lee, son of R Lee were among them. This has been another hard day's march, about 20 miles.

Monday, April 10, 1865
The men have been giving out yesterday and today. I took the sick headache about noon, but little to eat. I gave out about two miles of Berksville. Friends helped me or I could not have got into camp. As it was I was about an hour behind the Company.

Tuesday, April 11, 1865
Am Still very weak, not able to march. Yesterday we got the news that Gen R E Lee had surrendered with 30,000 men. We are ordered to stop here. We are all very tired and hungry. Ate corn that the mold had left. Drew rations in the evening.

Wednesday, April 12, 1865
Nothing new, only moved our camp about ½ mile east. Saw about 20 captured C. S. cannon, 5 of them steel ones of Amstrong make of 1864, marked Richmond Arsenal 1865.

Thursday, April 13, 1865
Drew rations again. Beef, pork, coffee, shugar, salt and hardtack. Hundred and thousands of soldiers and teams passing every day. Most of them going east. Allen rejoined the Co. Nearly all expect to go home soon.

Friday, April 14, 1865
Air cold last night, the day bright and clear. Marched about two miles and joined our regiment. Received first letters yesterday.

Sunday, April 16, 1865
First inspection. Passed. Heard a rumor this morning that Lincoln, Seward and son were assassinated last night.

Monday, April 17, 1865
Changed camp today. Raised our tents about 15 inches high. Picked the "Va geese" or in other words, the pitch pine bushes to make beds for ourselves. The boughs make very good beds.

Tuesday, April 18, 1865
I record this evening with deep regret, our reluctant conviction of Lincoln's death. Just as he was about to enjoy the fruits of that peace for which he had been so nobly struggling, he is shamefully assassinated. O! for vengeance! Vengeance!!

Wednesday, April 19, 1865
Nothing unusual.

Thursday, April 20, 1865
Co E 1st Minn Vol joined the Batl (Batallion) near Berks Junction, Va. We heard today that Mobile was captured with 2000 prisoners and 150 guns. This is said to be official. Also a rumor that the 11th Minn Vol were drownded.

Friday, April 21, 1865
Not very well. In fact quite a number of the Co. are complaining. I missed drill and dress parade the PM. The first I have missed. I was to unwell to attend. Allen rather sick too.

Saturday, April 22, 1865
I feel better today. Received the rumor that Johnson had surrendered. Our Lt Colonel and 2nd Lt. Wheeler arrived today.

Sunday, April 23, 1865
Inspection of arms by our Lt Colonel. He is a very strict and tall, well formed man, gray eyes, hair and whiskers named Downey. A rather cool day, in fact a cold day for this climate this time of year. Dress parade in the evening.

Wednesday, April 26, 1865
Was on picket all last night. Slept none. No alarm on the picket line. A man was shot about 11 at night at headquarters by the guard for theft or attempting to steal.

Friday, April 28, 1865
Two official orders were read on dress parade. One announcing the surrender of Gen Johnson, the other the death of J. Wilkes Booth. The orders were received with three rousing cheers. The Colonel smiled a little.

Sunday, April 30, 1865
Rain last night. Sherman of Co C was crazy last night. Supposed to be caused by medicine. After dark we were ordered to carry all our shovels etc to Head Quarters. We are under orders to march.

Tuesday, May 2, 1865
About 11 AM came in after drilling about 3 hours and received orders to pack up and march immediately. We started about 2 PM. Marched hard toward Richmond. We double quicked some. We were very tired at night.

Wednesday, May 3, 1865
Started about 6½ AM. We marched hard, camped on the north bank of the Appomattax about Sundown. The country looks desolate and abandoned. O! we long for our northern home and a citizens freedom. We think we are going home.

Thursday, May 4, 1865
Passed the Amelia Courthouse about noon. It is a small place. Sheridan here burned a large rebel wagon train. A large number of shot and shell were lying here. The boys were much interested in them.

Friday, May 5, 1865
Started this morning about 5 o'clock. Arrived at Manchester in sight of Richmond about 9 AM having marched 9 miles this morning. We have marched over 60 mi in about 2½ days an average of about 24 miles per day, through rain today.

Saturday, May 6, 1865
We marched through the Rebel capital about noon. Saw Castle Thunder Sibly BEC [?]. The city looks badly. We had a hard march through the city. Many fell fainting and were assisted by the inhabitance in the city.

Sunday, May 7, 1865
Marched all day. Crossed the Tamrunca [?] River just at dark on a pontoon bridge. Halted for night at about 9 at night. Jos W Green fell out today. He is about used up. Poor man, I fear he will not get through.

Monday, May 8, 1865
Marched all day. Passed Hanover C. H. today. Men are failing every day. We see no use of such hard marching. Though we expect it is "Military."

Wednesday, May 10, 1865
Marched all day on about half a breakfast, no dinner except a very small piece of broiled beef and a cup of coffee. A great many had nothing. Bought a few cakes for supper. Passed through Fredericksburg about 3 PM. The oldest and worst used up town we have passed.

Thursday, May 11, 1865
Drew two days hardtack shugar and coffee this morning. The men were very hungry. Have heard nothing of Green. Allen is better. Devine is in the ambulance. A heavy rain commenced about five o'clock. We marched on until after dark in mud and rain and hail.

Friday, May 12, 1865
We passed a cold rainy night. I believe the most miserable I ever passed while in health. We had to stand by the fire in the cold and rain. We were in a worse fix than our friends at home imagine.

Saturday, May 13, 1865
Allen is not able to march with the Regt so he and I straggled today behind the corps. We had a great deal easier time than we would have had with the Co. We arrived at the corps camp about 10 at night, found the men wet from fording creeks. We felt a great deal better than they. We are camped within 12 miles of Washington.

Monday, May 15, 1865
Moved about four miles nearer Washington. Green joined us yesterday morning. He came through with the fifth corps. We saw the top of the capital today.

Tuesday, May 16, 1865
We are in camp on the original North West corner of the D.C. The corner stone is defaced by being shot. We are in sight of Munson Hill where the rebs kept McClelan at bay with wooden cannon.

Wednesday, May 17, 1865
Nearly all the 1st Minn were detailed for picket duty today. We picket around the brigade. Nothing new.

Thursday, May 18, 1865
Came in off picket about 10 AM. Went to work immediately fixing our tents, raising them about 18 inches. Shortly after we began it commenced to rain heavily. We pitched our tent and crawled in. Did not get wet. A good many did. They pitched no tents.

Friday, May 19, 1865
We got our tents up from the ground in the evening. Rained hard nearly all night. We did not get wet. A rumor this morning that the soldiers whose time is out before the first of Nov next will be discharged first. We are to pass through review on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Saturday, May 20, 1865
A rainy day. Devine, Ellis and Stearns quite sick. So is Hofman. We have rumors every day about being discharged. Still we know nothing positively. 28 reported to the Dr. this morning. There are 90 in the company.

Monday, May 22, 1865
Rained a little last night. The morning cool and breezy. The day tolerable warm and more rain. We are fixing for the grand review tomorrow. Each man has a badge on his cap and a pair of white gloves.

Tuesday, May 23, 1865
We started for Washington about 7 AM. This has been a day long to be remembered by the nation. As we passed through the streets they were lined with wealth, fame, and beauty. The streets were full of soldiers, said to be 75,000.

Wednesday, May 24, 1865
Sherman's army passes in review today. Grant's yesterday. Today will be another grand day. We have various rumors about our destination yet the most of us think we will soon go home. Yesterday and today have been clear, cool, and pleasant.

Saturday, May 27, 1865
Allen and I with 9 others of Co D were detailed for picket. We were stationed on the post where 4 men were severely shocked by lightening last week. They had just relieved us on the 18th of May. They are all said to be alive but one is hopeless.

Sunday, May 28, 1865
Came in off picket. Heard that Kirby Smith had surrendered all his possessions. Thus the different pillars of this accursed rebellion fall one by one. Soon all will own the lawful authority of the Union.

Monday, May 29, 1865
The news is still cheering. We think we will soon be going rejoicing to our northern home. So be it. We understand that half of our Corps horses are to be turned in at once.

Also, that the names of the vets in our regt are to be at once sent to Headquarters.

I'm far away from Those I Love

I'm far away from those I love
From Mother sisters all
I list in vain to hear the voice
Of little Almon's call.

I'm often thinking of my friends
Up in my northern home
Familiar things again I view
And through the forest roam.

In dreams I clasp warm friendly hands
My mother's kisses meet
I wake to find 'tis but a dream
But while a dream - how sweet.

While dwelling on these much loved scenes
My tear drops will not stay
'Tis the burden of my dreams at night
And lingering thoughts by day.

If Heaven wills I hope we soon
Shall to those friends be borne
And then I trust we never shall
By trator hands be torn.

Munson Hill, Va May 29th 1865

Tuesday, May 30, 1865
Today the 2nd A.C. was reviewed by Gens Mead, Hancock, and Humphrey, the latter our corps commander. I was not out. It is said to have been a grand thing but very fatiguing to the men. It is to be hoped that these grand reviews are over. The men dread them.

Wednesday, May 31, 1865
Yesterday I saw in the Chronicle that if Kirby Smith has surrendered, that all western troops will be discharged as soon as possible after the 1st of June. If not, the vets will be retained. So, as we are satisfied that Smith has surrendered we expect soon to start west.

Thursday, June 1, 1865
The 19th Maine from our Brig. started home this morning. The first death in our Co. occurred about 3 AM today. Oscar M. Thompson was the victim of a fever. He appeared to be a noble man. We have now lost one man and will I fear lose more if we do not soon leave here for the north.

Friday, June 2, 1865
About 10 AM the 6th A. C. commenced to pass our camp. It took them about 5 hours to pass. The last of the train got past about 6 PM. The day has been warm. Have seen no order yet that speaks of our discharge yet we hope we will soon.

Camp Munson Hill, Va June 2nd, 1865

Perhaps a few stray thoughts will not be amiss to fill up these vacant pages or at least to fill up my vacant thoughts and give me employment during my leisure and help me to recall what I have seen and passed through when I return to my northern home if ever I do. And if I do not, something may be found in these jottings that may possibly interest some friend. With these thoughts in my mind, I commence this sultry morning to transfer a few items in addition to what may be found in other places of this sketch book.

I do not and cannot expect to tell all and perhaps I may not write anything interesting to anyone but if this should meet other eyes than mine, let it be remembered these items are not written for the public but for myself and if it is written in a confused or mixed manner, let the same be remembered.

The pictures of the past are not now as vivid as they have been, still, to commence with something I shall never forget, I will speak to Bidding Goodbye to friends at home.

Well do I remember the day and hour when I packed my sachel, closed my trunk, choked down my rising emotions, glanced rapidly around upon much loved articles, clasped the hands of brothers and sisters, received my mother's last, lingering, loving embrace, her warm maternal kiss, another glance, and was gone from under that roof which sheltered much that was loved by me with a love that I shall never forget. I remember each step from the house to the sled that was to bear us away. When on it, I looked again, one was standing at the end of the house, others were gazing from other to catch the last glance of my brother Allen and myself as we drove down the road perhaps never to return. The most I dreaded on leaving home was the effect that I knew it would have on my mother. She is a very affectionate woman and the best of mothers and to see two of her sons start for the army I know will affect her keenly but may Heaven support her and us and though we may never meet again here on earth may we meet where there is no more war nor rumors of war and not tears nor sleepless nights caused by fixed [?] apprehensions of death, danger, or separation from those we love.

It is now a little over two months and a half since we bid farewell to friends, home, and kindred and started south.

I do not remember anything very interesting except what may be found elsewhere until we reached Chicago where we stopped at the Soldier's Rest where we had good fare and all we wanted. The eating department we understood was conducted by the ladies, and indeed it showed women's tact and skill to an extent that was quite refreshing. It is said the building and furniture belong to the ladies of Chicago. There many a weary, hungry soldier is received and fed. The cars bore us rapidly from here towards Washington. We passed through most of my native state, Indiana, in the night and arrived at Ft Wayne just after day break. Then after breakfast, started for Pittsburg. The scenery through east of Ft Wayne appeared to me to be rather monotonous. Our attention was frequently attracted to the houses as we passed by, the ladies waving their handkerchiefs to us. So they did all along the route. I was much interested in all I could see in Pittsburg but as we arrived at 9 PM and left in 6 hours after, we could see but little though I could discover that it was a large business place but sadly blackened by coal smoke. The most striking thing I saw in Pennsylvania was the Mountain Scenery and their Connections. The R.R. ran in some cases on the edge of steep bluffs or cumpassed them. At other times it passed around deep gullies. One I remember especially. It is called "The Ox Bow." Here the cars run on the edge of a very deep ravine, in places perhaps hundreds of feet deep. The tender here jumped the track on a very heavy down grade. No particular damage was done except the breaking of some of the boxing of the tender and perhaps a few other breaks but the whole train came very near being thrown down the bank. If it had, hardly a man could have escaped. There was perhaps 3 or 400 aboard. The train ran at least ½ a mile with the tender off the track. It is very doubtful that it could have run a half dozen rods farther.

While looking out of the cars about as we came into Maryland, I was somewhat surprised at the color of the soil which was a Red Clay. This red clay appears to extend through a great share of Virginia as we saw in nearly all neighborhoods through which we passed. This clay looks very much like red brick dust. It is mixed with a shining substance which we understand is "Isinglass." In many places we could pick it up in scales as large as a finger nail.

Sunday, June 4th

Although it is diverging from the times of which I have been writing, I wish to enter my protest against a military sabbath, or Sunday. Instead of trying to ease the soldier or give him an opportunity of thinking of his spiritual duties he is almost invariably told to prepare for inspection which means to clean up his gun and accouterments and do a great many other unnecessary things which from their nature greatly inclined the soldier to forget the better thoughts which should, of all other days, be present. I long for a Sunday at home where I can attend the Sunday School and meetings as of yore. Often do my thoughts ramble back to the many pleasant hours I have spent at Terrysburg in Ind and at Watertown in Minn while attending upon the duties of the sabbath. "Duties" did I say? I ought more properly have written privileges, for privileges they truly are, although I never saw it in the light as I do now. We have been hoping for some time that we would soon start for our homes where we can enjoy a Sunday once more. We are still in such hopes and the time is shurely drawing nearer though when it may come we can not tell.

Va as I have seen it is not very attractive. The soil looks very poor to me. The most that I have seen is covered with yellow pitch pine which appears to be of very little value. It is generally hard to split and while green will scarcely burn at all. A kind of gum or sap oozes out of it when it is cut or bruised. This gum is mostly turpentine and perhaps the timber is valuable to make turpentine of. The houses of Va are of what I would judge to be of a very ancient style. Nearly all the chimneys are out of doors and are built the size of the fireplace up as high as the second story and two fireplaces in each chimney, one on the lower flower and one on the upper one. The country is very thinly settled. I think not as thick as Minn where I have seen it. I do not know that I saw the best of the state but suppose I did as I saw it from City Point to Berksville Junction and thence via Richmond and Fredericksburg to Washington. A little north of Richmond looked very well, the rest was very poor.

Am I Homesick?

This question I occasionally ask myself and how to answer it I scarcely know. But one thing I do know. That is my thoughts wander toward my own loved home whenever an opportunity offers. I think of mother, brothers, sisters, relatives and friends at home. I see in imagination each object as I saw it last. It was covered with snow and had all the appearance of winter. Since leaving home I have seen many houses which no doubt have their own peculiar attraction as homes for those who lived there. I have seen some beautiful groves and pleasant places surrounding some noble mansion but from all these I gladly would turn to a little double log cabin in the far northwest where pleasant memories cluster and kind friend wait to greet me and a now sad mother would give her soldier sons a welcome home and such a welcome as a mother alone can give. Now am I homesick. If I am is there anything unmanly or unsoldier like in it? I think not for if to be a soldier I must forget that I ever had a home, that I ever had friends at that home, poor as it may be, that those friends are thinking of me as unworthy as I am, and are counting weeks and perhaps days of my probably absence. If, I say, to be a soldier, I must forget all of this and abandon myself to curing with my mouth or my heart, and other practices which are generally supposed to be true of soldiers in general, "Then I am not now and by the blessing of God, I never will be a soldier." But I do not think it is necessary for a soldier thus to abanon himself. It is true there are many inducements, many temptations for him to unbridle his lips and fall into the usual habit of speech. But if he is true to his God and himself he will not do so. And should he become dead to thoughts of home he is farther gone than any it has yet been my fortune to meet. So don't blame the soldier for homesickness.

There are very few who know what Peace is. I have heard folks in the north talk of "Peace," of "Glorious Peace." They would talk and talk of peace yet they were as ignorant of what genuine Peace is as the "Man in the Moon" might be supposed to be. After saying what I have, it would look presumptuous for me to try to define it. I realize I can not picture it but I am very much of the opinion that no one who has not seen war felt war, eaten war, drank war slept with war for a pillow, in short been surrounded by war, immersed in war and war all about him can know or appreciate truly the gentle beams of Peace and he can no more tell you what it is than you can tell him what is Heaven. This is if he has all this time been a Searcher after peace and if he has, I am doubly shure he can not explain it. If the peepl of the north wish to make themselves out a grand lot of Know nothings, they will keep harping about his angel Peace, complaining that she has not blessed us when the north see what the south has, and felt the pangs she has felt if the north had raise the suicidal hand as she had and seen our fields trampled down, our fences burned, black coals marking the places where our snug homes had lately stood, our friends laid low in dust, our mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters, and neighbors turned against us or fleeing in wild dismay, their footsteps marked by their bleeding mangled feet, or know they are lying in some loathsome dungeon, covered with vermin and dying with disease and neglect, then after such a night as this, when day has dawned on us and we have confidence that that day will last, then and not much before then, can we understand the value of Peace. I was once simple enough to think I knew the value of peace and could understand the horrors of war to a considerable extent. But I now know I had a very limited idea of both. I know but little now but I think after seeing what little I have seen, I have a more correct opinion than I had before I started South.

Monday, June 5, 1865

We had preaching in camp last night by the Rev. Mr. Chambers of Rochester Minn. It was quite refreshing. Allen got a letter from his wife. She was rather discouraged by report in the press.

Thursday, June 8, 1865

Very warm. The sixth corps was reviewed in Washington today. It is said quite a number of soldiers died from its effects and that 27 ambulances were sent after those who failed. These reviews sound well but are great nuisances.

Sunday, June 11, 1865

We have had a very close inspection today. It is sickening to give all the details. But the friends at home ought not to think we do not observe Sunday in camp for we do in our way. That is we do everything almost that we ought not.

Sunday AM, June 11, 1865

It is now only about noon but for fear that some of the items may escape me I now seat myself to write what has been done in our Reg't since morning. I will write it to show how Sunday is regarded in camp. To explain what has been done in our company, supposing it is a fair example. Last night we were ordered to be ready for a general inspection this morning about 8½ o'clock. So immediately after breakfast we had to commence cleaning our guns, accouterments, shoes, etc change our clothes, pack our knapsacks, put on our haversacks, canteens, knapsacks etc. The process of packing our knapsacks so as to suit the fastidious taste of our colonel is no easy job though some succeeded and I congratulate myself on being so lucky as to escape Sensure. Our underclothes were to be laid as nicely in the pocket of the knapsack as if they were lying in a rose wood clothes press, at least the edge exposed to view must be so, in the other side must be our old pants and blouse, our woolen blanket on top of the knapsack, rolled tight, the buckles of the straps exactly on the top. If anything was wrong it must be refixed and be just so. One Co. who failed to be exactly right are to be reinspected this afternoon. But what was the worst of all was an order from the Colonel that every bunk should be spread with a blanket and the owners sitting in the tent. Then the Colonel would pass down one side of the street and up the other while the men having risen and saluted him were to stand at the corner of their tent until he had passed. That looked to me to much like coming a "Gesler" game over us and I'm not wishing to make a martyr of myself by refusing like Tell to obey, quietly left the camp until his Royal Highness had passed. Then I returned to find my bunkmate had got very thirsty and had gone after water. There is nothing exagerated in the above but even as it was, it would not have been so bad if it had been done some other day, but it shurely is not keeping the Sabbath holy.

Monday, June 12, 1865

Nothing new. Only the old stories and rumors worked over, rubbed up made to appear new to unskillful eyes. It is somewhat amusing to observe now many shapes and colors a rumor will assume, often that of an official order.

Thursday, June 15, 1865

Well that long looked for and long delayed order for our starting has at last come. We are ordered to move tomorrow morning at 2 o'clock. We go to Washington, there to take the cars for some point west, perhaps Louisville, Ky.

Friday, June 16, 1865
This morning we left our camp, marched to Washington and took the cars for Louisville. Allen stayed to come with the rations. There were 49 cars in our train for about 25 miles and one engine.

Saturday, June 17, 1865
Arrived at Harper's Ferry before sun up. The buildings are mostly stone. There is a splendid bridge here. We have been traveling all day, among, around, and through the mountains. We got some hot coffee and dried meat at Cumbesland [?] for dinner.

Sunday, June 18, 1865
Arrived at Grafton, Va about sun up. We have commenced to go down the west side of the mountain. Arrived at Parkersburg about sun down. We have passed through 23 tunnels since sun up. Some I should judge were near a mile long. A man last night fell off the cars and broke two of his ribs.

Monday, June 19, 1865
Went aboard of the Lechlaire VO 2 at Parkersburg and started down the river about 11 o'clock AM. I have now rode on the upper Mississippi, the Potomac, and now am riding on the Ohio and the latter appears to me to be better than either of the others taking the scenery of the shore into consideration. It is beautiful.

Tuesday, June 20, 1865
I [?] most beautiful country I ever saw lies on the banks of the Ohio. We noticed more thrift and enterprise on the Ohio than on the Va and Ky side of the river. Vineyards and fields lined the Ohio shore. The people appeared more pleased at sight of the soldiers than on the southern side. Passed Cincinnati.

Wednesday, June 21, 1865
Arrived at Louisville in the AM. Crossed over and through Jeffersonville, Ind. in PM. We camped above the city on the river bank, good water, a pleasant place. Lt W. Holden struck a man on the head with his sword very severely. The Colonel knocked another man down with his sword.

Thursday, June 22, 1865
The actions of our officers yesterday with some exceptions was shameful. Drink is supposed to be the cause of it. Heaven deliver me from drunken officers or drunken men. Today our camp is being arranged. We are settling as if we were intending to live here.

Monday, June 26, 1865
Ellis and I went to Louisville on passes today. It is a very busy city. I was very well pleased with it. It is built, generally, in a very substantial manner. Its being a rendezvous for troops gives it quite a lively air. Ferry boats cross loaded evry few minutes between this city and Jeffersonville.

Tuesday, June 27, 1865

Soldiers are deserting every night. They say the war is over and they have now filled their part of the contract and now they are going home. And I believe many others are only waiting for their pay to go, too. The Government shurely ought discharge them immediately.

Thursday, June 29, 1865

The weather here is very warm, the theromometer ranging about 80 & 90 degs. Diarea is the prevailing disease in our camp. I know of none seriously ill with it. Several are afflicted with Homesickness. They look bad. I think that it the most that troubles them.

Friday, June 30, 1865

Yesterday N. B. Conner came down to see his brother. We saw him. He reports all well about Perrysburg. Yesterday we signed for pay up to April 30th though we got no money. Today we were mustered for pay up to June 30th. We gladly received a visit from the paymaster.

Saturday, July 1, 1865

Helping to make out muster rolls. Heard today the 11th Minn Regt were in town. Went to see them. They were not there. Heard from a friend that they passed through and took the cars last night. We have a brother, A. B. Hosmer in the 11th. I do wish I could have seen him.

Sunday, July 2, 1865

On guard. It has been 13 days since I have been on guard. I have heretofore neglected to notice a "Coleope" on board the steamer Potomac which runs between Cincinnati and Louisville. They give us a tune or two nearly every time they pass. It is compose as well as we could tell of a set of steam whistles.

July 2nd 1865

Since writing the forgoing scraps, we have passed once more the mountains of the east and I hope I never shall have again to pass them on the same errand. Somewhere in these sketches I have noticed our first passage over the mountains but this one was far more terrific than that in this we passed through two weeks ago today 23 tunnels between sun up and sun down. Besides others we passed before. The natural scenery was grand and impressive. Sometimes towering cliffs on one side and deep ravines on the other. Sometimes we would appear to be shut in by a vast wall of mountains like an amphitheater but as we drew under this wall, our "iron horse" would gracefully change its course and circle around a point of the mountain or dive defiantly under growing trees, rocks, earth or human habitation into deepest darkness plunge then suddenly emerging day again would rush on to new scenes and wonders. It is pleasant to see how skillfuly nature has covered with beauty many a wild and rugged object. It [In ?] other places this curtain of green is thrust aside and the elevated rock stands out in bold relief.

Our Trip Down the Ohio

was, aside from our conveniences aboard the boat, both pleasurable and exciting, not an excitement of danger but of wonder and joy. Wonder to see the vast resources of our country as dimly shadowed in all we saw. Joy at sight of the pleasant homes clustering on the banks of the river. The banks were not to say bluffy but just elevated high enough to show the beauty and richness of the land. I have no doubt this same beauty and richness extends back into the country. If it does and if there is nothing to contradict the appearance of things, shurely the northern bank of the Ohio is a happy place to live. There is only one place that I saw that I thought I would like to live unless it is near Jeffersonville, Ind. I can scarcely tell why but I felt freeer when I knew that I was in a state that had always been free of that hellish curse, slavery. O! my country thou art free but at what a price! Heaven protect us now that we may never loose that freedom. Cursed be that hand that shall ever be raised to rob us of our hard and bloody victory. Yea, cursed be those lips that dare breathe... a traitorous thought. O! Heaven help us to protect ourselves.

Wednesday, July 5, 1865
This evening an order was read on dress parade stating the remainder of the 14th, 15th & 17th corps and the Provisional Div are to be immediately discharged. The order was received with three loud long cheers and a tiger. We serenaded the Gen and Colonel and Colonel commanding the brigade.

Thursday, July 6, 1865
The greater part of the talk today is about going home. I spoke to the Colonel this evening about a pass for Allen to go to Loshers. He granted it and told me we would start from here by the 13th of July instead of the 17th.

Friday, July 7, 1865
Allen started for Loshers today, this morning at 7:30 AM. He has not been well for several days. He is now quite weak but I think he is able to get through. He is to meet the reg't at Chicago. Osea Bienhart started home today with Allen.

Saturday, July 8, 1865
Green and I went after blackberries this morning. We got quite a lot of them. Sat. is Green's Sunday or rather the day he keeps for Sabbath. I am helping make out our muster out rolls today. We did not get through, will finish in two or three days more. All the company writing.

Tuesday, July 11, 1865
We are getting along fine with the rolls although it is quite an undertaking to complete them as there is a great deal to do and we have to be so very careful not to make mistakes. We have been quite lucky so far.

Wednesday, July 12, 1865
The rolls are finished and the blank discharges have come and we expect to start home tomorrow. Still we are in a kind of feverish excitement for fear something unknown will keep us longer.

Thursday, July 13, 1865
We are in a fever of expectations waiting for the order to strike tents. Well it comes at last and we are ready to "Fall in" and start for the cars. We went aboard the cars and the train moved about 1 PM. We are going home.

Friday, July 14, 1865
Arrived at Indianapolis about noon. Went to the Rest and got dinner. Then started for Chicago via Lafayette. Arrived at the latter place about dark. It seems like a pleasant place. We stopped in town for the officers to get supper and something to drink.

Saturday, July 15, 1865
Traveled all night. Quite cool and rainy. Arrived at Michigan City in the morning. I think Sandy City would be a more proper name for it. We arrived at Chicago about 10 AM got a good dinner at U P H then got second class passenger cars for Milwaukee.

Sunday, July 16, 1865
We got a grand reception at Milwaukee last night. I never saw the like. We were received like brothers by beautiful and interesting ladies. The First will long remember last night. We got to LaCross today. Took the steamer "McClellan" for St. Paul.

Monday, July 17, 1865
Received a grand reception at St Paul today. We will long remember it. A stranger would have thought the "First" was the only regiment thought anything of. The eatables were extra and to spare. Long live the ladies of St Paul. The firemen were out in force.

Tuesday, July 18, 1865
We are now thinking of going home. We think a few more days will end our camp life. We are not sorry. We are camped on the open pararie with good water about ½ of a mile off and mushelves in close range and very impudent

Thursday, July 20, 1865
Last night about sun down the Colonel told us that if we would be back at 10 on Sunday we might go where we would. I cam home. Walked all night with five others. Got home about 11 today. Surprised all our folks. 'Twas a pleasant meeting for all of us.

Friday, July 21, 1865
Allen came home this evening. He was not expected. He came in a chance buggy. He goes back tomorrow morning with Ellis. I go tomorrow noon with a hired wagon. We think we will be discharged next week. The Eighth came in yesterday.

Saturday, July 22, 1865
Started for camp at the Ft about 5 PM. Had rather a poor team and we got along rather slowly. The teams were loaded to heavily. Still I hope we will get through in time.

Sunday, July 23, 1865
We traveled the most of last night. The horses are very tired. Morning we walk up more hills than I like to, especially when I pay for riding. We got the camp about noon. Rained all the morning. The First rather declined to fall in for inspection this evening.

Monday, July 24, 1865
We fell in for inspection last night when our Cap. asked us to, not before nor would we. The Colonel had gone beyond his duty or so we thought. The most of the men made quite a humiliating apology today but not I nor would I. Still we had been led partly by a report we had heard.

Tuesday, July 25, 1865
The report referred to yesterday was that the paymaster would be ready to commence paying off at noon today but the Colonel wanting a review or inspection of the regiment tomorrow we could not be paid until Thursday and we naturally did not like that way of doing.

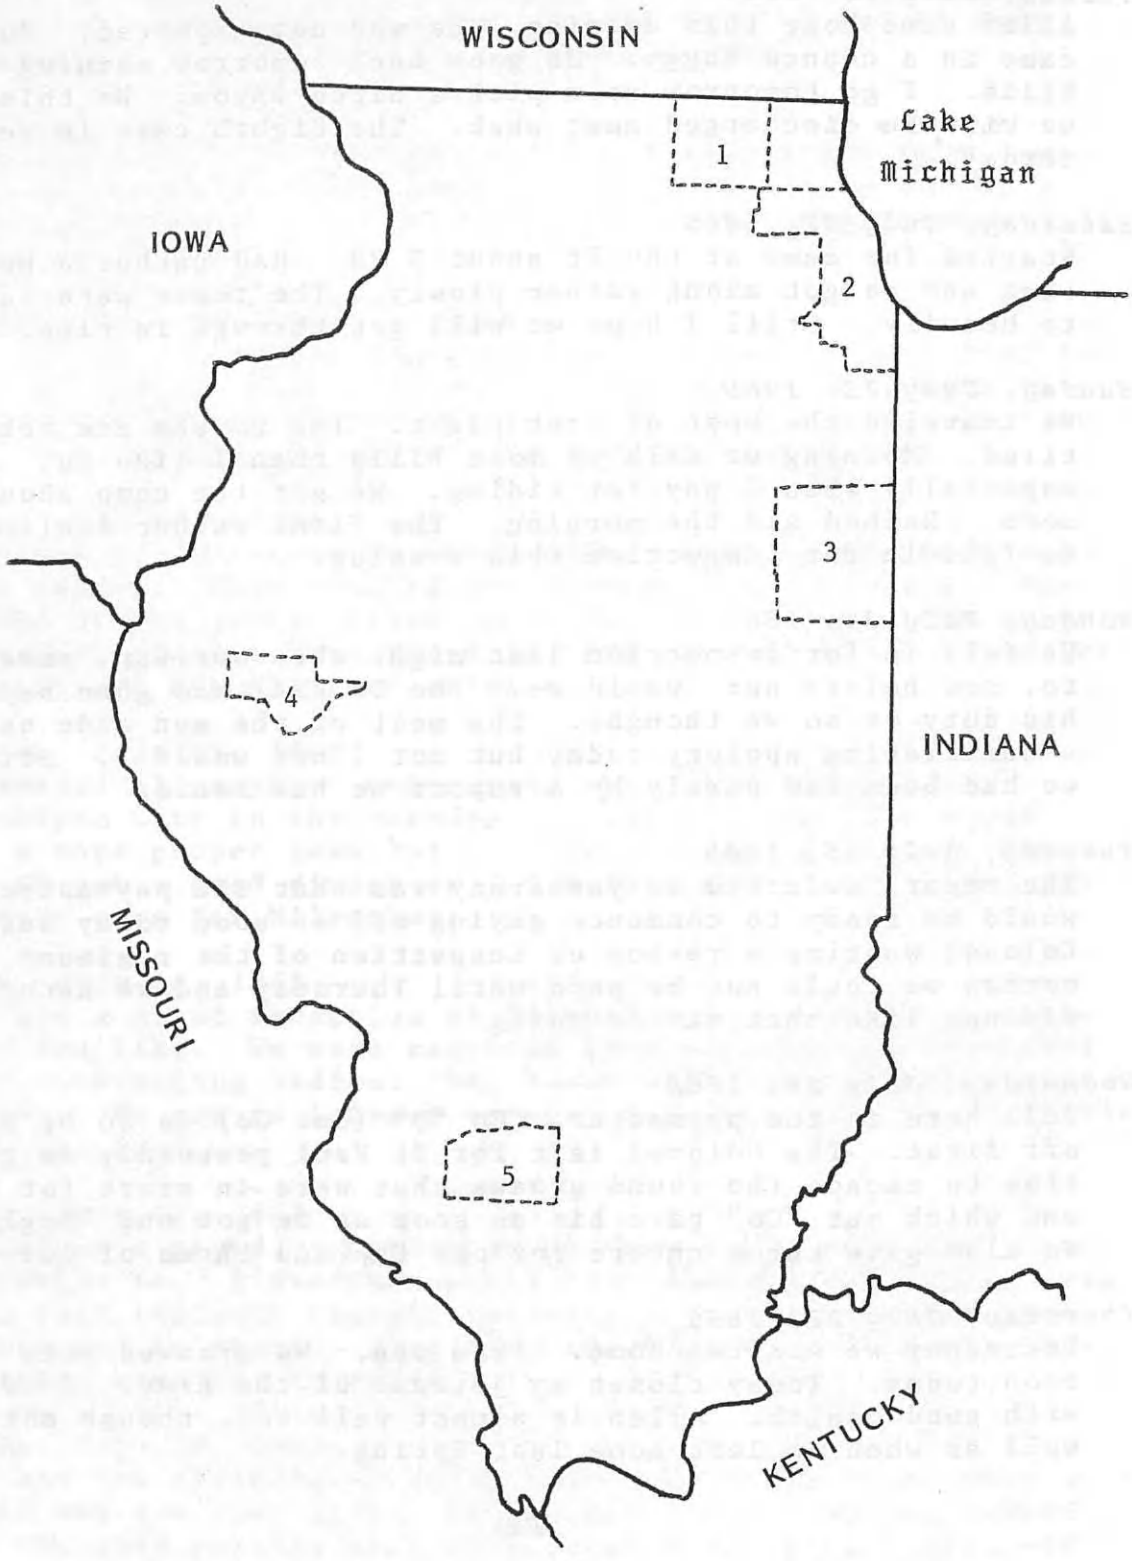

Wednesday, July 26, 1865
Well here is the paymaster. Co "D" (our Co) is to be paid off first. The Colonel left for St Paul yesterday in good time to escape the round groans that were in store for him and which our "Co" gave him as soon as we got our "Eagles." We also gave three cheers for our Cap and three of our major.

Thursday, July 27, 1865
Yesterday we started home. Free men. We arrived home about noon today. Today closes my journal of the Army. I return with good health. Allen is almost well too, though not as well as when he left home last Spring.
